The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our adown by adding feathers to it. We go the distance for you." FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comdown by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

Who Is Responsible?

Hard Hitting Newspaper Investigation Leads To An Astonishing And Unexpected Result

By Dan Rattiner

One of the major functions of this newspaper is that when we see anything wrong, we point it out, look into it, and, if possible, help fix it.

Three weeks ago, for the first time, we saw something wrong. Herds of highway construction people were descending on the Hamptons, jackhammering the streets, digging holes, installing curbs, dropping in pipes, and heavy duty drainage cesspools. Traffic was being diverted at various times, streets were blocked off all together, and even after hours there were traffic cones and flashing orange lights on sawhorses blocking the way all through the night.

After a springtime where so many good people from the various village improvement societies had worked so hard to make our colonial New England downtowns beautiful for the summer season, this was very hard to take.

Basically, in our first article about this mess, we said that we should find out who was responsible for deciding to do all this construction in the middle of our summer season, and then we should hang them.

It turned out, first of all, not to be the local village or town highway department people. As a matter of fact, they were as appalled as anyone else about what was going on. Then we thought it must be > the State Highway people. But we called Albany, and after a week and a half of passing the buck and expressing disbelief that anyone could be doing this, (we thought they were covering each others behinds because of the string 'em up part of our story) they called back to say it wasn't them either.

What do these pipes do? Absolutely nothing. Who do we hang? We're going to have to build the largest

At this point, I sent a reporter to look at the sides of the trucks. Something we should have done in the first place. What were the signs on the sides of the tractors and steam shovels and backhoes being used? That should tell us. The reporters came back with "Caterpillar" and "John Deere."

"This makes no sense," I said. "What happens when you talk to the workmen?"

"They won't talk to us. They say talk to the foreman. And the foreman tells us he's under orders not to speak to anybody about the work."

And so it was that I found out by accident. Cat and I and the rest of our household are this week hosting two Chinese exchange students. Their first morning here I had to drive them to the Ross School to attend an orientation meeting. They had to be there at 7 a.m.

And so it was after dropping them off, I stopped in town on Newtown Lane in East Hampton to get some coffee and happened to be present when

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

This Saturday night, Muriel Siebert, the first woman to obtain a seat on the New York Stock Exchange, will be honored with the P.O.N.Y (Pride of New York) Award, presented annually to a deserving New Yorker. The event, which will raise money for MaryHaven, a non-profit organization that aids the retarded and mentally ill, will take place at the home of Richard and Eileen Eckstract in Bridgehampton. The award will be presented by last year's recipient, Dan Rattiner.

Many movies are being made here in the Hamptons. One of them, "G," is filming in Quogue. Another is casting at Frazier Dougherty's Pinewood East Studio. Meanwhile, academy award winner Barbara Koppel continues to be at various events, filming footage for her two part special on the Hamptons, which will air on NBC next March.

Dan's Papers Publisher Dan Rattiner, Tearsheet CEO Jill Johnson and Tearsheet Marketing pro Rachael Florio are hosting a party late Saturday night at Jason Strauss and Noah Tepperberg's Conscience Point to celebrate the launch of Dan's Papers new centerpiece magazine Southofthe Highway. See you there.

Shirley Lord and husband Abe Rosenthal held a party at their home in Bellport for public advocate candidate Betsy Gotboum the other night. Guests included Charlie Rose, Amanda Burden, Sara and Mitch Rosenthal, Arlene Alda, Ron and Isobel Konecky and Amanda Burden.

Former movie producer and author Dominick Dunne will be in the Hamptons over the Fourth of July weekend. Dunne will read from his new book Justice: Crimes, Trials and Punishments, at Guild Hall on July 7.

Among the many high profile people attending the premiere of the "Sonic Convergence" symphony at the Ross School last week were Nicole Miller, Martha Stewart, Chevy Chase, Denise Rich, Randolf Duke and of course Courtney Ross, the school founder. The musical piece was put together by students from Shanghai, Stockholm, and of course, Ross in East Hampton, in a project that took three years. Quincy Jones supervised and arranged the piece.

the first of the workmen, with their hardhats and toolbelts began pouring out of their automobiles. They were early for work, and, gathering to socialize before the start of the day, arranged themselves around a bulldozer that had been left on the street overnight, eating donuts and drinking coffee.

I looked around. No foreman. I went over to talk to them.

"Hey guys."

"Hey."

"Where you from?"

"Who we work for? Can't tell you that."

"No. What town are you from?"

"Provincetown, Massachusetts," one of them said.

"Cape May, New Jersey," said another.

This absolutely bowled me over. Turns out each and every one of them is from a resort town in the Northeast, none of which are in New York State. They are from Bar Harbour, Maine. Virginia Beach. New Hope, Pennsylvania. Cambridge, Maryland. Point Pleasant, New Jersey.

I raced to the office, made some phone calls, and I found out the truth. Sometime early this spring, some of the resort towns in our area, tired of having their business drop off because of the incredible popularity of the Hamptons, met in New York City and agreed to send half of the workmen from each of their highway departments of those villages and towns to the eastern end of Long Island for the express purpose of ruining the Hamptons.

They are doing a very good job of it. Nobody is shopping downtown this summer unless they absolutely have to. Who would want to? Not only that, one of the workmen told me, cheerfully, months and months of construction remain.

Curb and sidewalk demolition people from Newport, Rhode Island, have torn up the flower beds at the corner of Route 114 and Highway Behind the Lots in East Hampton. Electrical workers and water main installers from the Highway Department in Stonington, Connecticut are putting in pipe on the town green in downtown

A-List B-List

A Simple Test Shows The Difference Between The Cream And The Creme de la Creme

By Dan Rattiner

Here's the difference between an A-List celebrity and a B-List celebrity.

Mick Jagger comes out to the Hamptons. He actually did this last weekend, and by Monday he was not only gone, but everybody in the country knew what he did while he was here. All you had to do was read the tabloids.

Mick had dinner at the Turtle Crossing Restaurant in East Hampton with an attractive young female person who was unfamiliar to all who observed her. Was this his latest girlfriend? On Saturday night he went to see Pearl Harbor at the East Hampton Cinema and, according to a report by one see-in-the-dark observer, tears welled up in his eyes during a love scene between Ben Affleck and Kate Beckinsale. On the other hand, another observer reported that tears welled up in his eyes during a completely inappropriate moment in the movie.

Like when the Admiral gave the order Tora! Tora! her neck causing severe neck trauma, black and He stayed at the home of Lorne Michaels, the producer of Saturday Night Live. He also ate at another restaurant where he got into an altercation blue marks - later documented? - and humiliation, according to her soon be to filed lawsuit, removed her film, did the same thing to a smaller camera in her bag, and then left.

Not only was all this in the tabloids, provided to well-known columnists by spies, public relations men, marketing people, papparazi and others lurking in the bushes (the hedgerows), but it also inspired another writer, since Jagger was now in the news for the weekend, to interview a South American honey who dates him. WHY I SLEEP WITH MICK JAGGER was the headline.

"I find boys my age boring in bed. Mick Jagger has had long experience and we have great sex. That's why I sleep with him."

> with a photographer. He allowed his photo to be taken when he went into the restaurant, and then asked that as a result of this cooperation she not be there when he left. Instead, she was. A member of his entourage pulled the camera off from around

A B-List Celebrity is someone who's had some minor accomplishment, knows A-List Celebrities and can sometimes induce them to come to a particular party or fundraiser. I am arguably a B-List Celebrity because as the longtime editor of this newspaper I know a lot of A-List Celebrities.

But to see the difference between A-List and B-List, look what happens when you plug my name into the above report, replacing "Mick Jagger" with "Dan Rattiner." Of course, you have to make minor modifications.

Dan Rattiner comes out to the Hamptons. He actually did this last weekend, and by Monday, everybody in the country knew about it because it was all over the tabloids.

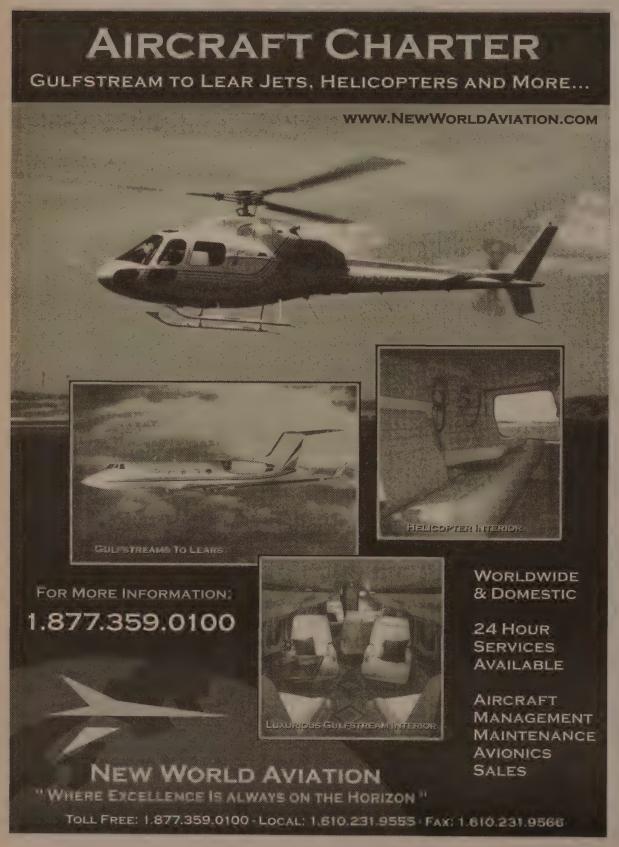

(This is a stretch. For purposes of this report, we define the Hamptons as not including Three Mile Harbor Road where he lives full time. He came out to the Hamptons from Three Mile Harbor Road. He goes back to Three Mile Harbor Road on Sunday.)

Dan had dinner at the Turtle Crossing Restaurant in East Hampton with an attractive young female person who was unfamiliar to all who observed her. Was this his latest girlfriend? On Saturday night he went to see Pearl Harbor at the East Hampton Cinema and, according to a report by one see-in-the-dark observer, tears welled up in his eyes during a love scene between Ben Affleck and Kate Beckinsale. On the other hand, another observer reported that tears welled up in his eyes during a completely inappropriate moment in the movie. Like when the Admiral gave the order Tora! Tora! On the other hand, maybe he just had something caught in his eye. Or he was having trouble with a contact lens, something he later adamently denied saying he doesn't wear contact lenses and that is a false statement.

He stayed at his home on Three Mile Harbor Road, which is not the home of Lorne Michaels, the producer of Saturday Night Live. He also ate at another restaurant where he got into an altercation with a photographer. He posed for this photographer when he went into the restaurant,

Cats, Dogs, Teenagers

The Violation-Of-Zoning Livestock Farm On Three Mile Harbor Road

By Dan Rattiner

I don't know if it is legal, but Cathie and I are raising livestock here on Three Mile Harbor Road. Our herd consists of cats, dogs and teenagers. About a dozen of them if you clump them all together.

The teenagers, all male, are probably the least interesting of the group. When home, which is when they are hungry or wish to sleep, they keep to their rooms and stare at computer screens. For the most part, they send e-mails back and forth to one another and to their friends in other houses staring at computer screens. The topic usually has something to do with parties and girls and What are You Doing, I Dunno, What are You Doing. Their rooms are a mess. We try to get in there at least once a year to hose them down, clean out the manure and give them fresh hay. Some years we succeed. Some years not.

The cats are the most interesting. They are home all the time, either sleeping under something where they can't be stepped on or harrassed by dog or teenager, or wandering around aimlessly. Sometimes, if they see a door open, they dart out to the swimming pool for awhile, although once they are out they don't seem to have remembered why. About the only organized things they seem to do are sit by a door waiting for it to either open or close, or, when hungry, go in the kitchen and sit on the floor and stare at you. When they are

Another of them, at approximately three month intervals, climbs up on a lap, settles down and purrs. He just stays there. Another one will claw you if you try to pick him up. It is hard to tell these two apart, which can be a problem.

The dogs are the most fun. There are three of them, the smallest of which is a tiny bichon frise that could fit in your coat pocket. The largest is a great dane, who, if she wore a coat, could fit you in her pocket. In between is a dog more regular sized, which is a wheaten terrier.

The reason I am writing this, actually, is because last week we lost one of the herd. If you see him, give us a call and tell us where he is. We'll come and get him.

The reason we had this loss, and this is the first time we've ever lost any member of the herd, is because of the installation of the dog door. The dog door, when I first saw it in the hardware store, seemed to be the greatest invention of all time. No more hearing things bark, meow or shout and having to run over and open or close a door to (Continued on next page) really hungry, they leap up on top of the regrigerator, sometimes all four of them at once, and squall and carry on. One of them, a grey and white one, seems to be fascinated with the dripping of the faucet in the upstairs bathroom, but only at night after everyone goes to bed. He's in there if you get up in the night. And he acts very irritable and put out if you go in there.

let something in or out. Why hadn't anybody thought of this before? Of course, I didn't think the male teenagers would fit through the dog door. As for the cats and the rest of the livestock, I did think our problems would be solved. I was wrong. The binchon frise bumped his head on it the first time he tried to go through it and refused to use it again. The great dane tried it and decided it was too small. The cats, watching the dogs get bumped and beaned, would have no part of it. The only animal that found it to his liking was the middle sized dog, the wheaten terrier. The wheaten would run in and run out, run in and run out, amazed and delighted at the wonder of it. He'd do it every afternoon. We installed the dog door just to the right of the kitchen slider leading out to the pool. To the left of the slider is the refrigerator. To the right of the dog door is some kitchen cabinetry.

What happened was I was standing in front of the refrigerator, the door of it opened, peering into it, trying to decide what to eat, when the wheaten terrier wandered over. He looked into the refrigerator for awhile too. Then he looked at the sliding door, then he looked at me. How about opening the slider for me? he asked. It would be just like old times. I opened the slider, he stepped back, and, getting a running start, went bounding out, landing on a cat lying in the sun by the slider. The cat hissed, and immediately, the dog bounded right back into the kitchen, immediately remembered the dog door and, figuring there is another way out of this berg, began to skitter the six feet across the kitchen linoleum to get to it.

Ever been in a situation where you see that an accident is about to happen, everything seems to be happening in slow motion, yet you remain glued to the spot?

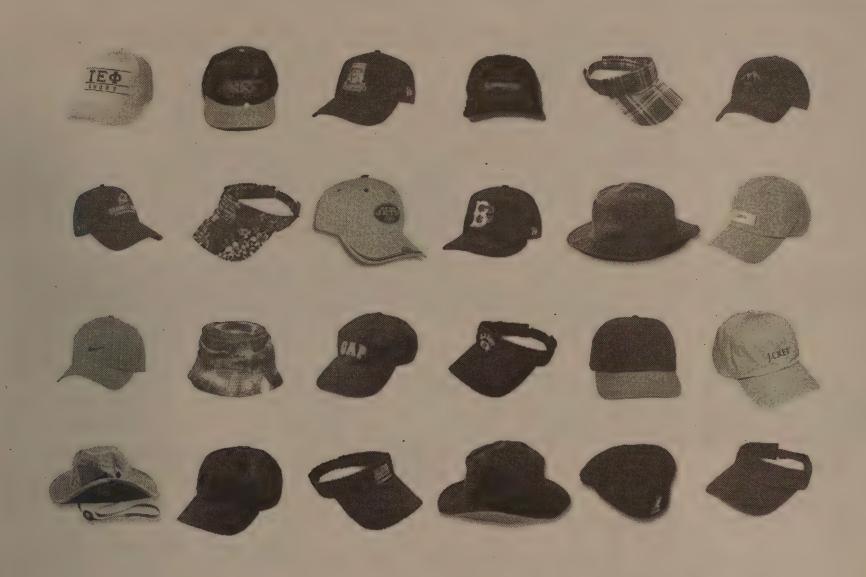

Standing in front of the refrigerator there, out of the corner of my eye, as the dog skittered around on the linoleum, I saw through the slider that the cat, having just fended off a wheaten terrier, had roused himself from his slumbers, and, to avoid a repeat of this occurance, had walked quickly over

School Safety

How Not Wearing A Hat Stops Violence And Promotes School Safety In Sag Harbor

By Dan Rattiner

that all the schools in the state would have to create some new rules to deal with student safety and security. Albany was concerned about heading off violence in the schools, people machine gunning each other and so forth and surely there are concerns about that, at least since Columbine. What should happen if there was a sudden incident in the making? What should everybody do if suddenly an alarm went off? Albany wanted the schools to have plans.

The news from Albany came down as a mandate called SAVE, or Safe Schools Against Violence in Education. They described Albany's concerns pretty much as outlined above. How it could play out would be decided by each community. But the schools would have to have plans in place before July 1.

Most of the school districts on the east end 11 public hearing. The part of SAVE that was Two months ago, word came down from Albany developed plans without a problem - July 1 is next week after all. But in Sag Harbor, where this observer has seen some pretty strange behavior come out of both the village board and the school board, SAVE was leapt upon with a fervor of enthusiasm - nobody is arguing that nothing be done - that was unrivalled.

The Sag Harbor plan was unveiled at a June concerned with preventing violence apparently had spiraled downward from They shouldn't carry guns, to They shouldn't wear military uniforms, > to They shouldn't have slogans on their t-shirts that say BURN DOWN THE SCHOOL to Let's have a Dress Code.

> Specifically, the plan would forbid the wearing of shirts that bore obscene, provocative or angry slogans (no FUCK SCHOOL for example since, after all, that might encourage people to burn it down), forbid the wearing of clothing that would promote or endorse alcohol, tobacco or other drugs, and, considering that such things as exposed cleavage could distract a young man from the causes of the Spanish-American War, "extremely brief garments which expose the midriff, or extremely brief garments such as tube tops, net tops, midriff tops, halter tops, spaghetti straps, plunging necklines, hip-huggers and see-through garments.' Also forbidden were hats.

I was kind of struck by the inclusion of hats in this list. I always thought that hats worn during class kept a person's brains in place and helped prevent whatever came in through the eyes and ears from leaking back out the top of the head.

"I've been wearing a hat in school since fourth grade and it hasn't been a problem," a 10th grade student, Jim Calfa, said, although he did not have with him his grades.

Beaver, in Leave It To Beaver wore a hat to class, and that was on TV, one parent said.

Needless to say, the officials holding this meeting quickly gathered up their papers, said they would have to get together soon to have another look at it, said there would be another public hearing, and that they would probably not be making the state mandated July 1 deadline (which, without extensions, convert to funding losses.)

To the best of my knowledge, there are no other public schools on the east end that have a dress code, although there are both private schools and Catholic schools in our area that have them.

The Village of Southampton has a dress code. Downtown on the main commercial streets, you can get a ticket if your body is uncovered from just above the aereole of the breast (look it up) to midway between the top of the hipbone and the knee. That law was passed in 1911. And they still enforce it.

There is also a dress code at our house, the result of a meaningful discussion we recently had with our four teenage boys after reading about SAVE.

Our dress code is very simple. It is No walking around in the living room, kitchen or other public spaces in your underwear, with especial attention to not answering the front door in your underwear. Bathing suits and towels over the shoulder, we decided, are okay anywhere. Also, bikinis on girlfriends, but that was after long debates, two public meetings and several revisions.

through the dunes at Napeaque. Another hurricane would divide Long Island into four islands," said Richard G. Hendrickson, official cooperative weather observer for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

And guess what? He is predicting another severe hurricane for this summer.

"There will be one hurricane this summer, probably in August or September, or it could come in late October," he said. Mr. Hendrickson is a Bridgehampton resident who has been observing weather for the United States government for almost seventy-one years. He believes that the ocean will wash through Main Street of Montauk Village and into Fort Pond Bay: This flood will also wash through Lake Montauk and open it up into the bay, creating the four islands. He speculates that this effect will last ten to twelve days.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association does not necessarily disagree with him. It predicts that there will be eight to eleven tropical storms along the Atlantic coast this year. Five to be a severe hurricane this season because of the "If we get another severe hurricane, it will go seven of the storms are predicted to become hurricanes, with one or two likely to hit the U.S.

coast during the season from June 1 to Nov. 30. These figures represent a typical hurricane season. Mr. Hendrickson believes that there will increasing temperatures throughout the century. The greater the temperature, the greater the likelihood of storms. His records indicate that from 1901 to 1917, there were twelve days in which the temperature reached ninety degrees or higher. The last eighteen years have included eighty- five days that exceeded ninety degrees. Along with the increase in temperature, he noted that, "In the future there will be more tropical disturbances, some more severe than those in the past, due to changes in climate and air pollution."

Dr. William Gray, Professor of Atmospheric Science at Colorado State University, agrees with the NOAA's predictions. His studies indicate that the probability of a storm touching down on the U.S. Atlantic coast is about fifty percent. Meanwhile, Matt Easton, one of Gray's research assistants, highly doubts that a severe hurricane will come anywhere near here.

"The chance is pretty small," he said. "The amount of time between (severe hurricanes) is forty to fifty years, especially that far north." He explained that the reason for this is that the cooler water around Long Island weakens the storm considerably, causing a severe hurricane to become either a weak hurricane or a tropical storm. Considering that we had a major storm in 1938, Hurricane Gloria in 1985 and Hurricane Bob in 1991, it seems like we shouldn't be due for another severe hurricane until about 2025.

Mr. Hendrickson hopes that he's wrong, and that we don't have a severe hurricane this year. He made the same prediction for last summer, yet we didn't experience a hurricane. "I have to tell people what I feel from my years of experience and hope I'm wrong," he said.

Whether we get a major storm or not, local residents need to be ready. The American Red Cross recommends creating a disaster supply kit including first aid essentials, canned food, bedding, three gallons of water per person, a battery powered, radio and flashlight. And if the storm can be avoided, do so.

"Pay attention to what the weather service says," Mr. Hendrickson warns. "If it's going to be severe, you better get out. Better to leave four times (with no hurricane) than make a mistake and lose your family." Whether he's right or not with his predictions, he's right about that.

How Giorgina Reid Worked Every Sunday For 25 Years And Saved The Lighthouse

By Dan Rattiner

In 1985, I attended a ceremony out at the Montauk Lighthouse to honor a small, dedicated woman named Giorgina Reid who almost single handedly saved the Montauk Lighthouse from the erosion that had threatened it for three hundred years. At this event, a Coast Guard band serenaded Ms. Reid, and a letter, addressed to her, was read over the loudspeaker. It said that the writer had heard of her remarkable achievement, that there were few people who could or would do what she had done and that he was proud of her. It was signed by the President of the United States at the time, Ronald Reagan. Ms. Reid for me she probably never would have come to Montauk in the first place. She did, however. And the Lighthouse stands today.

I had been part of Ms. Reid's story at Montauk. In fact, if it hadn't been

Before I go on, I should note that Ms. Reid died this week at the age of 92. The news has traveled like wildfire through Montauk. Her story needs to be told.

As many people know, I have been running this newspaper for many, many years. In 1967, following up on what I thought would be a routine story about erosion at the Lighthouse, I discovered that the Lighthouse might not be there for many more years.

I had been told the Lighthouse, ordered built by George Washington, was originally located over 300 feet from the bluff. Now it was only year, the Commander has issued an order for a survey team to find a site further inland so we can erect a steel tower with a light on top. We intend to abandon the Lighthouse. Probably tear it down. You don't need a whole Lighthouse to warn mariners. Just the light."

If somebody had told me at the time they were going to tear down the Empire State Building, I could not have been more astonished.

I wrote about the plight of the Montauk Lighthouse. I formed a committee to save it. The committee held demonstrations at the Lighthouse to urge the Coast Guard to find a way to save the structure, or at least rescind the order to abandon it. And in the middle of this, I was contacted by a woman named Giorgina Reid. She said she had read about the problems with the Lighthouse and asked if she could come to my office. I told her sure she could.

She arrived, with her husband Donald, and with a book entitled How To Hold Up A Bank. I thought she was maybe 45. She was 60. She and her husband lived in Jackson Heights and had a (Continued on next page) > 55 feet from the bluff. I had this conversation with the Coast Guardsman in charge at the Lighthouse at the time.

> "That's 245 feet in 177 years. More than a foot a year," I said. "At that rate, the Lighthouse will fall into the sea around 2008. What is the Coast Guard doing about it?"

> "Well, we measure the loss every month. Last year was a bad one. Two feet five inches. This summer home on Long Island Sound at Rocky Point. Hurricanes had eroded the cliff in front of her home, and she had found a way, using planks and reeds, to lightly fortify the bank and stop erosion from continuing. She had gotten a patent on the process. She had written this book. And she asked if she could approach the Coast Guard with the idea of trying out the system at the Lighthouse. I told her go right ahead. And I told her she was on our Committee.

After three demonstrations at the Lighthouse, some of which involved more than 5,000 people, the Coast Guard agreed to rescind the order to abandon the structure. They also, reluctantly, agreed to allow Ms. Reid and her husband and the volunteers that Ms. Reid had rounded up, to do whatever they wanted on the steep bluff in front of the building. But they would not contribute to this effort. In fact, they required that she and Donald purchase insurance to indemnify the Coast Guard against any accident that might befall them.

And so thus it was, that every Sunday, she and her husband and a half dozen volunteers would drive out from Rocky Point and put in this interlocking system of reeds, planks and wooden stakes, creating tiny terracings about the size of a flight of steps.

I went out to watch them at work on numerous occasions. It seemed like it ought to work. But the cliff face, eighty feet high and perhaps a quarter mile in length around the Lighthouse, seemed so vast. After six months, they had installed the terracing on perhaps one hundredth of the cliff. It was my opinion that even if the terracing worked, they would only get perhaps one fiftieth of it done in a year, and at that rate the work would take 50 years. More than likely, they would — given the length of the drive from Rocky Point - just make their point and go away. They couldn't possibly terrace the entire cliff face. That was surely impossible. If it were ever to be done, it would have to be done as a vast government project, certainly. One could hope.

But the Reids never counted on the government. It was true, particularly after a year went by and every Sunday the Reids and the volunteers were still there, that the government came around to helping her. Lumber was purchased. Some of the Coast Guardsmen got permission to help her on what was otherwise their Sunday day off. The State of New York voted to buy her some much needed tools and equipment.

And the work went on and on. I recall, at one point, having not been in touch with what was going on at the Lighthouse for over two years, to find they were STILL THERE, still coming out every Sunday, working, from the crack of dawn until late in the day. I was amazed.

Everyone was amazed. And the terracing was holding. And getting BUILT. By 1985, when Georgina was in her mid- seventies, the work was more than half done. It had been begun at the point of the most dangerous threat to the Lighthouse Building. And it had worked. The Lighthouse remained just 55 feet from the edge

By Dan Rattiner

This is the story of two women, one from New Rochelle and the other from Queens, who got married, had children and then one day after a series of catastrophes that included death and divorce, met one another at a kindergarten playground with their children and became close friends. Today, almost thirty years later they remain close but in addition the business they have started together, SeidenGang Jewelry, has thrived beyond anyone's imaginings.

Their heavy gold brace-lets and necklaces, imaginatively designed with clear references to antiquity, are sold in hundreds of stores around the country including London Jewelers and Sak's Fifth Avenue and are to be seen around the necks and on the wrists of people such as Barbara Sinatra, Martina Navratilova and Paula Zahn the newscaster who wears it while she anchors her television show.

If Seiden Gang sounds like an odd name, it is. It's the joining of Carol Seiden and Carolyn Gang whom I am interviewing over lunch in a club in Manhattan.

Carolyn Gang was born and raised in New Rochelle, the daughter of accountant Saul Gang, who handled the affairs of Edgar Bronfman, John Loeb, Tony Duke and the Lehman brothers. Carolyn went to Bank Street College, then Syracuse University where she got a degree in political science and history. Then she married David, a Yale Law School graduate who opened a practice first in Washington then later in New York. Carolyn had two children, Doug now thirty-four and Peter now thirty-one, and raised them in a beautiful home in Scarsdale. For a while, she went into business with a partner, out of her house and formed a company called Tree Top Books that advised private teachers on what books to buy for the classrooms and for their children to read at home.

Carol Seiden was born in Brooklyn and raised in Flushing, the daughter of two high school teachers, one in English and the other in Physical Education. She went to Queens College and received degrees in Education and Psychology and, after getting a teaching degree, taught for a while in Harlem, then married and had two children, Adam now thirty-four and Jennifer thirty-one and moved to Scarsdale because of the school system. Her husband Len Seiden became a legend in the advertising world. His firm did the well-known campaigns for Hamilton Beach starring Joe Namath, Reunite on Ice and Mr. Coffee with Joe DeMaggio. Carol played tennis and had a little gift business. She and her young family vacationed in the Hamptons on Shelter Island at the Pridwin Hotel.

Who's Here:

Carolyn Gang

Carol Seiden Carolyn Gang of "SeidenGang"

Carolyn Gang and her young family, during this same period, vacationed in Water Mill in a house they rented on Cobb Isle Road, off Cobb Road. They didn't know one another. Where they met, however, was in the playground of the Scarsdale school, their older and younger children were exactly the same age, fice and three,and they became fast friends.

Inside the boxes were wooden trays and inside the wooden trays were about 200 little plaster reliefs of ancient coins. Tuscan, Roman, Greek...

During the next five years they saw one another through major crises in their lives. Carolyn Gang went through a divorce. Len Seiden became ill and passed away long before his time. Where they had been together en famille with husbands in their lives. they were now each alone with children going through difficult times. They had until now been supported. Now they would go it alone.

"We went into business together with a company called Dial-A-Book," Carolyn Gang said. "This was about 1978 and was a precursor to Amazon.com. There was, near our homes in Westchester, a book distributor named Dimenstein in New Rochelle. We would invite people to call us - that was the Dial-A-Book part - and in forty-eight hours we would pick up books and deliver them for birthdays, for people in hospitals, for kids. We thought, for special occasions people are used to candy or flowers, why not books?"

It was a good business, though the books tended to be heavy what with all the boxes to carry around. And when the book distributor Diminstein closed their warehouse in 1980, they were without a nearby source of supply and so shut down too. Now the girls went into the retail jewelry business, though not with a store. They would buy gold chains on Seventh Avenue and Mary Kay fashion, and take them to their friends at country clubs, private homes and so forth. The price of gold was very high during this time, about $800 an ounce, and so they sold necklaces with hollow gold beads and mixed colored stones. Soon, they hired sales people and gave them a pouch with thirty bracelets in it and sent them out. The firm was called Goldbugs and at one point they had twenty people selling in New York, New Jersey, and in parts of California. And then in 1986 something happened that was to change their lives.

"My father-in-law had an advertising art studio business," Carol Seiden said.

"But what he really liked to do was to collect things. One day in 1986, which turned out to be about a year before he died, he came up to the offices his daughter and her partner Carolyn rented above a deli in Scarsdale lugging dusty boxes containing wooden trays."

"I found these in the basement," the senior Mr. Seiden said. "I got them in an antique shop outside London about twenty-years ago. I just put them down there, hadn't opened the boxes since. I thought you could use them in the jewelry business."

of these relief molds. But how to pour hot gold into them without destroying them?

"We took them down to 47th Street to get some advice from people in the gold business," Carol Seiden said. "And on our way to a meeting with one of the casting experts we met a man in the elevator who asked what we had there. We told him and showed them to him.""

"I could do that for you," he said. "I could mold silicone in them and then work from there."

He gave them his card: Steven Tegu with an address on the East Side on 81st Street. They then went to see the casting guy who said, there was no way to do this and that he couldn't help them.

"The next day we took them to Steven Tegu's apartment. It was a little place four flights up on 81st Street. He had liquid silicone in little baby food jars and as it started to harden he pushed the little plastic molds in to make the transfer. They would harden. That worked. At this point in our interview Carolyn Gang took out a bag, opened it and handed me some of the heavy and fabulous pieces that many say have changed the jewelry industry. These bracelets and necklaces made of solid gold were enormously detailed. Each used the ancient images from the mold, which was combined with elements of and modern art, the two working together.

"You can wear it all day," Carolyn Gang said.
"You can wear it in the day and then keep it on right through the evening. It works for almost every occasion."

The pieces, which sell for tens of thousands of dollars all are richly constructed and built with great attention to detail. One piece for example has a clasp that's built right into it, you don't even know it's there. Another, a necklace, has an elaborate gold cage on one side and when you turn it, there is an identical one on the other. You can wear it both ways.

"It's the element of surprise," Carolyn said. "It's different each time you look at it. There are pieces made of several different kinds of gold, green gold, white gold, distressed gold. Our advertising slogan

review: married moments

By Jan Silver

A new play by novelist and biographer B.H. Friedman is having its first full production at Guild Hall, East Hampton. It is, alas, more a staged reading than a play. The characters speak in a series of monologues, dialogues and one four-part exposition. There is a story and there are some clever lines, but onstage it is mostly talk and minimal interaction. The two main characters connect for a few brief moments in two scenes at the end of the second act, but it comes too late to sustain audience interest for a whole play.

Last Friday the problem began just after the prologue. The male protagonist, Dudley, shuffles on stage-left, as an old man. He bemoans the indignities and infirmities of advancing age. His wife Alison, somewhat peppier, enters stage-right spotlight and comments on husband Dudley's comments. Then Dudley says this will be a look back at his memories of their 50-year marriage. (A variation on Thornton Wilder's Our Town...?)

Their story is mostly told, not revealed through action and dialogue. Dudley and Alison come across as cliches of upper-middle-class WASPs. He's a banker who plays squash, loves his work and his wife, has children, builds a second home in East Hampton, and feels useless when he retires. He says of his wife that she is a collector, works part-time editing a scholarly journal, likes to travel, raises the children, is jealous of his secretary, etc, etc. Only in two second-act scenes—when the couple argue and make up—is it possible to believe these could be real people who love each other.

The playwright also leaves many open threads in the story: why didn't a well-educated, successful man make some plans for retirement activities? What happened to his wife's business? Why aren't their adult children part of their lives?

Actors Peter Brouwer (Dudley) and Kate Bushman (Alison) work very hard to breathe life into basically two-dimensional characters. Alex Dmitriev (Dudley's friend Ralph), Beverly Wallace (Alison's friend Jennifer) and Hope Singsen (Dudley's secretary Beryl) do their best to resuscitate one-note roles.

The play is directed by Alan Wynroth with costumes by Carlotta Kerwin, lighting design by Joe Marchese, and Kevin Monk as production stage manager. Abingdon Theatre Company of New York City, a nonprofit group interesting in developing new American plays, produced the play for Guild Hall's John Drew Theater. Married Moments has final performances this Thursday through Sunday.

review:cabaret

By Helga Morpurgo

When Christopher Isherwood wrote Berlin Stories, he probably never dreamed that his autobiographical tales would be adapted for the stage, screen and musical stage in so many contrasting ways.

I Am a Camera was the title of the play adaptation. The film by the same title starred the late English actor, Lawrence Harvey opposite a very young, charmingly eccentric Julie Harris. It was touching, innocent and frightening, in keeping with the ominous spirit of the 1930s.

Then came the Harold Prince musical, Cabaret, which opened on Broadway in 1966, with a brief Broadway revival in 1987.

It was the 1972 Bob Fosse version that introduced Lisa Minnelli to film audiences and went on to win eight Oscars. A London revival of the Fosse version in 1998 brought the musical to Broadway audiences, where it won four Tony awards.

The Fosse version was a modern adaptation of Berlin Stories that added elements of its own and ignored some of the features of the original story.

The earlier stage play and movie I Am a Camera told the story as it had been written by the aspiring English writer whose life became embroiled in the adventures of an eccentric, sexually liberated American would-be actress who moved into his rented room with him in pre-war Berlin.

Fosse substituted the innocence of the pre-war era with modern day brash stage action that not only pointed out the underlying decadence of the Nazi era but also boldly used music and risqué choreography to make statements about the political climate in pre-World War II Berlin. It also sought to define Sally Bowles' characterization as a psychologically damaged under-parented young woman. This adaptation was an anachronism that had an enormous impact on Broadway and film audiences.

Some of us who had seen "I Am a Camera" might still feel that it was the best and historically most authentic version of Christopher Isherwood's atmospheric classic.

Director Michael Disher made some hard and courageous choices when he decided to stage the 1987 revival of Harold Prince's version of Cabaret, which had enjoyed only a brief run on Broadway.

"The Fosse movie strayed from the serious message the original play intended," Mr. Disher said. "The Harold Prince version contains the strongest message. I chose to produce Cabaret because of its depth, rich layers, and textures. It combines elements of good playwriting with good music and a good plot line. As we know that doesn't always happen. I also like taking risks."

Cabaret marks Mr. Disher's sixth season as Director of The Southampton Players, a troupe comprised of seasoned regional actors and exceptionally talented Southampton College students.

Mr. Disher brings a double gift to his popular troupe, being both a director and a choreographer. Small wonder that musicals are a frequent Southampton Players performance choice.

Cabaret not only offers a huge production challenge because of the performance requirements inherent in a bold and glitzy musical, but also because of the expectations that audiences who have seen the Fosse version may bring with them.

Many features of the production are noteworthy, such as the professional quality of Michael Disher's set, which was beautifully implemented by Josh chaired by Gerald Levin, Chairman of Time-Warner, for the $250 million capitol campaign, was organized by Linda B. Shapiro, LBS Productions, with P.R. coordinated by another Hamptonite, Goldine Eismann. It was a major success!

Touted by the Sunday, June 17, New York Times Long Island section, as the "hot ticket" of the season, the "Phoenix House in the Hamptons" benefit, slated for June 30th, at the magnificent estate of Bob Hurst in Sagaponack, is bound to be an over-the-top success. The dinner - dance under a summer themed tent, accented with cool blues and whites, a performance by Epic Records, Amel Larrieux and spinning by celebrity DJ's Mark & Samantha Ronson, this will be a for sure sell-out! Information and tickets: Linda B. Shapiro - 631- 329-5480 and Jill Nevins at 212-997-0100.

The world premiere of the Mark Dendy Dance and Theater A Midsummer Night's Dream hosted by Christie Brinkley, Peter Cook and Robert Dash to benefit The Madoo Conservancy is Saturday, June 23, 5:30-8 p.m. The Guest of Honor will be Marco Polo Stufano, Director of Horticulture, Wave Hill. Tickets are available at the door. The post performance dinner is at the home of Jeffrey Seller and Joshua Lehrer. Cocktails and performance are $150, cocktails, dinner and performance are $500. Call 537-8200.

Last week, the Board of Directors of East Hampton House, headed by its President Jim Gregory, gave their Resident Manager Richard Kealy a Certificate of Appreciation for twenty-five years of dedicated service. Richard lives on the premises year round and keeps the place in great shape.

Julia Child will be the celebrated guest at the annual Chefs and Champagne Bastille Day Fete, Saturday, July 14, 5 p.m.-8 p.m. on the grounds of the Wolfer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack. How fitting: she was a great friend of James Beard. At this annual event, chefs of distinguished restaurants from Long Island, New York City and Philadelphia will participate in serving their culinary specialties. Christian Wolffer, was the event's host and Nina Griscom served as Chairman of the event.

Having just returned from shooting an upcoming feature in Mexico, Roy Scheider (comfortably staying close to home) booked Bridgehampton's World Cottage Audio & Post for his narration of The Learning Channel's newest documentary based on the Jules Verne novel "20,000 Leagues Under The Sea." ## OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 160 GRADUATION

Why is it called Graduation? Isn't school over? Shouldn't it be called Finalation since you have finally finished the education you have gradually gained the past twelve years? Termination would be accurate, and very appropriate for some. I think it's called Graduation because you are gradually getting older and becoming an adult. When one segment of your graduality is completed, you have graduated and therefore you have a graduation ceremony. Sounds like a good reason for a party to me

This is an exciting week for high school seniors, finally, the end of homework, peer pressure, and being forced to remain in captive situations with people you dislike. The liberation from high school will be one of the most memorable moments in your life. You get to wear a one-size-fits-Texas gown, and hat with a tassle, and sit for hours in hard metal folding chairs listening to interminable speeches while you think of the keg waiting for you at the beach. You get a silver bracelet with your name engraved on it. Your parents will recite the mantra, "Don't drink and drive" and "Don't have unprotected sex" ad nauseum, only later will you realize they were talking about themselves...

There are actually several points in life that should have Graduation ceremonies. Of course there's College Graduation. But I'm talking about the other gradually learned important stuff.

First Heartbreak Graduation. Somewhere in your twenties, you will experience the most intense love and most painful breakup of your life. This is the Big One. The One you will never forget. My One was Fred Gardner. We broke up when I was 21, and I couldn't bring myself to date anyone for two years after Freddie. This is heartbreak posed again after she followed him in to his table, and then as he was leaving the restaurant saw her again and asked that she please take more photographs of him and she refused. Angered, a member of Dan's entourage pulled the camera off from around her neck (causing severe neck trauma, black and blue marks – later documented? – and humiliation, according to her soon to be filed lawsuit) removed her film, did the same thing to a smaller camera in her bag, and told her when he said he wanted no more pictures he meant he wanted no more pictures.

Late Sunday night, those in the bushes outside of Dan's house reported that a great argument ensued inside where his other half Cat Squires wanted to know who was that other woman he had dinner with, what were they going to do about that lawsuit and what kind of an idiot was he crying at a movie called Pearl Harbor?

Not only was all this in the tabloids, provided to well known columnists by spies, public relations men, marketing people, papparazi and real estate people, but it also inspired another newspaper journalist, since Dan was now in the news for the weekend, to interview a South American honey who has dated him. WHY I SLEEP WITH DAN RATTINER was the headline.

"I find boys my age boring in bed. Dan Rattiner has had long experience and we have great sex. That's why I sleep with him."

There was hell to pay at the Rattiner household the next night, too.

EPILOGUE

Some history: Mick Jagger and the rest of the Rolling Stones spent a summer in the Hamptons in the 1970s, renting a beachfront house owned by Andy Warhol. My parents owned White's Department Store in Montauk at that time and got to know them pretty well. My mother, who lives in Florida, has a good memory of Keith Richards, who she came to like very much.

where you call their old phone number, even though you know they moved away and listen to the recording that says the number is no longer in service. The first ten days after the breakup, you gain about ten years emotional growth in empathy, compassion and maturity. And, like the old Roman saying, "Time passes love and love passes time." When you get through it, you realize a vital lesson. You can survive heartbreak. Congratulations, you have graduated from Youth into Early Adulthood.

Wedding Graduation. I didn't have a wedding. I was married by a judge (I should asked for a jury). However, every couple I have ever seen go through planning and pulling together a wedding has mastered logistics that would have stumped NASA. The couples who make it through the gauntlet of family demands/requests/suggestions learn three vital lessons in life. 1] These people are nuts. 2] You can't please everyone, and you don't even have to try. 3] All you need is love, love. Love is all you need. There's a great yiddish saying that two people in love can sleep on the edge of a sword. You'll learn how true that is, and — privacy was available in the Hamptons just about everywhere. (Today it still is, but only if you don't "Go Out.") The group was composing the music for a new record album. One song on that album is "Memory Motel" named after the Motel by that name in Montauk.

The phrase A-List and B-List originated around 1984 when Ronald Reagan was President and completely overhauled the income tax system. Before 1984, excess income was taxed at rates that went up to 94%. Today, excess income is taxed at rates no greater than 38%. In other words, before then, the government got it and doled it out to needy people. After then, the wealthy got to dole it out. This was called the "Trickle Down Theory" and it has worked pretty well. And it's become sort of a perk to the wealthy who get to decide what charity they want to give the money to.

How it works is that they hold a party and, often, the person who is the main donator, or who is able to get the main donations, is "honored." And it is an honor.

Those invited to the party are on the "list," the A-List referring to those who, if they were to lend their names or show up, would infer star status on the event, thus increasing the amount raised.

There is great merit to this "trickle down" system. Money is doled out by people who have earned the honor of giving it out, who care, and then it is given away by non-profit organizations who hire professionals who are trained to maximize where the money should best go.

In the old way, you had bureaucrats, rules and civil servants deciding things. It lacked a personal touch. And it was sometimes administered callously and poorly. Not as good a system, in my opinion, in an enlightened country where people care.

What do these pipes do? Absolutely nothing. Who do we hang? We're going to have to build the largest scaffolding imaginable. There must be Mayors and Councilmen from more than 30 towns involved in this.

What do we really do about it? Not a clue. There's too many other resort towns for us to send half of our Highway Departments up and down the Northeast. Write your Congressman. This cannot go on. A group of us are going to meet next week – still before July 4 – to see what we can do.

you just can't shake it. I know a wonderful woman who thought she had a rapidly growing ovarian tumor. She was convinced it was cancer and she held off going to the doctor until finally she just had to force herself to go in. He informed her the tumor was due in five months. It's a quick nine month transition to graduate from Marriage BC to Marriage AC (After Childern). Sex is now his thing, I mean, a thing, of the past. You will spend a fortune on equipment for the first baby. You will call 911 if the baby swallows a penny. As we all know, the first child is for practice. By the time you have the last kid, you will get one combo carriage/carseat/tricycle/bicycle/first car - second hand. And if the kid swallows a quarter, you'll want change...

From the beginning of Marriage AC, it's eighteen years for each child until the youngest is eighteen. The High School Graduation of the youngest child cooincides with graduation of the parent from Marriage AC to Let the Good Times Roll Adulthood.

Many parents will be graduating to Let the Good Times Roll Adulthood this June. First, they can have sex again in as many positions as they can remember or manage. A woman doesn't have to fret that her body shows the ravages of pregnancy, nursing and gravity, because, by Divine Grace, his eyesight is shot. Even the single parents graduate into Let the Good Times Roll. Single moms can date again without fear of the kid sabotaging any dates she gets. Maturity blesses all women with a wonderful gift of attitude. When she was younger and a man looked at her that special way, she thought, "Oh, I hope he likes me...". Now she's thinking, "Hey, if you don't like my peaches Papa, don't shake my tree."

Thousands of metal folding chairs will be up all over the east end this week. Thousands of people will weep as all these different levels of graduation occur on and off the stage. Some people will be looking forward, some looking back. Me? I'll be looking down at my first silver bracelet. It's got my name engraved on it.

Look out, I wanted to shout. But no words came out of my mouth. Instead, a wheaten terrier came vaulting noisily through the trap door and, for a second time, landed on the cat. The cat shrieked, leaped straight up, announced loudly that he would never, ever allow a dog to come hurtling out of a wall to pounce on him again, and, like a shot, was across the pool and over the fence. That was two weeks ago. He's not been seen since.

If you come across this cat — and he is either the one who sits on your lap and purrs happily hour after hour or the one who claws you until you bleed and then runs off — call. We'll dispatch a dog or a teenager and have him picked up. •

I am writing this for all of us who have someone in our lives whom we love and would never want to see any harm come to. Love is a wonderful feeling, one of its benefits is it takes us away from otherwise insurmountable situations to plateaus of, "we can overcome this together".

Then there comes that dark cursed time we all dread, illness, which, with all the love in the world, is the most difficult test of that love. Do we lose faith, or do we draw from that love the strength we need to overcome even the worst situations? Our family has come to that point where we need to concentrate all our love and help one of our family members get through a dark time. Michael is my son-in-law and has been living with HVC for about ten years, that we know of. His condition was always taken very lightly because he always looked so good and was in otherwise top notch health. We all felt that with his monitoring of his diet he would live to be a hundred. Michael is the kind of guy everyone loves. He is never too busy to help anyone and always has a smile on his face. Such expressions as "mench", "he hasn't got a bad bone in his body" and many other similar phrases have been used to describe Michael. I am sure some of you had the pleasure of having Michael do a drapery or shade installation in your homes, in which case you know exactly what I mean. This past winter reality set in big time. One morning Michael went to work to do his drapery. installations out in the Hamptons and on the way out he started coughing up blood. He returned home where the situation worsened, he was bleeding profusely. Michael was rushed to Stony Brook hospital where the doctors were at a loss. It was a nightmare, the weekend, with no specialists on staff and a relatively new disease which few specialists can even understand fully. It was determined that Michael's portal vein had burst due to the fact that the liver could no longer handle the amount of blood that it had to process. Michael's liver was obviously a lot more damaged than had been suspected. A new procedure for the liver, called a stint, seemed the only way to neutralize this situation. The problem now was that none of the staff at Stony brook had ever done this procedure and it is quite complicated. A stint, in as simple terms as I understand it, is a metal tube attached to the vein and inserted through the liver to relieve the pressure, hopefully stopping the portal vein from bleeding. Fortunately Michael's wife knew of such a surgeon and she called him, thank God he was home, and he rushed to the hospital to set up the procedure. Michael was saved and has been put on a liver transplant list. Anyone familiar with transplant lists must know that it is extremely difficult. There is an excellent chance that a partial liver transplant will increase Michael's chances. The liver is an organ that can regenerate itself. A doner can regenerate the piece that is donated and the recipient can grow more healthy liver tissue from the piece donated. The match is the key. Body weight has to be similar, blood type, and general health. I implore anyone who would be willing to share his or her love for life for Michael to please call Nora at 631-286-4690.

Dan's Papers And Tear Sheet Celebrate Southofthehighway

By Dan Rattiner

This Saturday, Dan's Papers and Tear Sheet magazine are holding a party at Conscience Point to celebrate the new centerpiece Magazine of Dan's Papers, SouthoftheHighway.

You are, I believe, familiar with Dan's Papers, which you are now holding in your hand and reading. Tearsheet magazine has its own story.

Tearsheet was founded four years ago in Miami Beach by international model Jill Johnson and art director/graphic designer Jason Losser. It was during the annual "season" in South Beach, when models and fashion industry professionals flock to South Beach, and the pair, and several others lamented the fact that there really was no meaningful trade publication for the industry.

Jill Johnson, an upstate New York girl, who had not only begun a successful modeling career, but had also graduated the University of Colorado at Boulder with a degree in English she earned with an almost perfect straight A average, felt she was just the girl to

Tear Sheet was put together on one computer, on a rickety card table in a tiny Miami Beach apartment. It's premiere issue ran to 32 pages and appeared as the full color glossy magazine it is today. Today it is publishing issue 24. It appears bi-monthly, carries all the news, trends and intrigues that abound in the industry, has, since issue 5, had supermodels on its cover, and at more than 100 pages every issue, is a well respected and stunning addition to the industry. Tear Sheet also publishes an annual 50 Most Beautiful Special Issue, also First Option, the first directory of legitimate U. S. modeling agencies, which is available along with subscriptions and access to recent articles, at www.tearsheet.com.

Jill still does occasional modeling assignments, which has helped her in maintaining an insider's perspective, crucial to the publication of the magazine. She also travels around the country on speaking engagements, both encouraging and > cautioning young people about the opportunities and pitfalls of entering the modeling field. There are many illegitimate "modeling" agencies and young people must beware of them.

> Johnson shares speaking engagements with a new rising star at the magazine, Rachael Florio, also a former model, (petite) who signed on six months ago.

Florio was born in Los Angeles, and, when her parents divorced, was raised on Long Island and in Dallas, where her father owned thoroughbred (Continued on page 48)

Brookhaven Lab Collaborates In Explanation Of Solar Neutrino Mystery

The Solar Neutrino Group at Brookhaven Laboratory was one of the research groups that participated in a recent study at the Sudbury Neutrino Observatory in Ontario. The study may have found the reason behind a mystery that has puzzled science for the past three decades: the missing solar neutrinos.

Neutrinos are subatomic particles with no electrical charge and a negligible mass. One type of neutrino, the electron-neutrino, is believed to be produced in enormous quantities by the sun, but since the beginning of the 1970s, it had been found that only a small portion of the number expected to be produced by the sun actually were detectable on earth.

There had to be either an error in our understanding of the nuclear mechanics of the sun or our understanding of neutrinos, or both.

The recent study undertaken in Ontario suggests a simple answer to the mystery: solar electron-neutrinos change into other neutrinos as they voyage toward earth.

It was in the 1970s that Brookhaven Laboratory's Ray Davies work in trying to capture solar neutrinos outlined the mystery of the missing solar neutrinos. Working in the depths of a South Dakota gold mine, Davies found that the number of electron-neutrinos that could be detected were few and far between. At the Solar Neutrino Collector in Ontario, 1,000 tons of heavy water intercept about ten neutrinos a day. The team from Brookhaven National Laboratory ensures that the Solar Neutrino Detector's heavy water remains ultra pure and is not affected by environmental factors.

Musical Director Daniel Koontz led an eightpiece band of well-tuned musicians as he participated on the piano, creating sharp changes of mood and atmosphere with targeted abandon. Cabaret decadence overflowed to the members of the band, who stayed in character wearing drag wigs and costumes.

Ben Miller's lighting design succeeded in establishing changes of mood, while the use of a smoke machine created the obscurity of memory.

Outstanding performances came from actors playing supporting roles, such as Lisa McCluskey as the tall, Nazi prostitute, Fraulein Kost, who never once lost the full impact of a completely realized "Master Race" characterization. Ms. McCluskey's command of the stage was enough to tell the story of a German attitude of dominance.

Vince Doty was touchingly tender and romantic as Herr Schultz, Frauline Schneider's Jewish tenant who engaged her in an ill-fated, bittersweet courtship.

The physical casting of Vince Doty opposite the very petite Laura Conroy as Fraulein Schneider couldn't have been more visually touching as they complemented each other's contrasting sizes with period images. Laura Conroy's character lost the starch of national posture as she softened in the company of her suitor. As one of the vocal statement makers, Ms. Conroy delivered her songs with commitment and attitude. Her duet with Vince Doty, "Married," was one of the highlights of the show.

Robert Meehan was outstanding in his clearly defined portrayal of the Emcee of the Kit Kat Klub. If anyone was looking for a Joel Grey look-alike whose articulate performance could rival the original, Michael Disher found him in Robert Meehan. Robert Meehan's delivery of "If You Could See Her Through My Eyes," was brilliant. He made his anti-Semitic statement visually clear as he whispered the word "Jewish."

English would-be actress desperately clinging to the illusion of building a "career" as she continues to perform at the Kit Kat Klub. The loss of innocence and impending gloom is deeply felt in her delivery of the song, "Cabaret."

Jeff Schaeffer, as Clifford Bradshaw, delivered his most credible and passionate performance in duo scenes with Gemma Breithaupt when they shared the symbiotic connection that had evolved from their loneliness. Mr. Schaeffer made emotional connection in each scene, especially during the conflicts that eventually brought about their characters' separation.

It is comparatively easy to mimic a successful production, but it is much more thoughtful to select what rings personally true.

Michael Disher made this production his very own, yet his trademark of making poetic choices at the end of scenes remains. Even in musicals like Cabaret Mr. Disher finds tender, magical ways to weave in the sadness of nostalgia just before the final curtain.

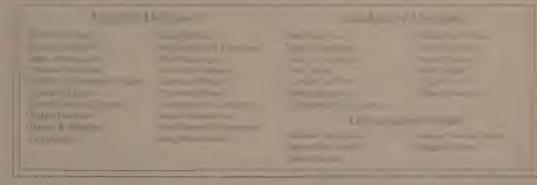

Christopher Isherwood, as the character Clifford Bradshaw, is enveloped in a misty fog as his lonesome train ride out of Berlin brings haunting whispers out of the hidden corners of memory while he writes his Berlin Stories.

of the cliff. And Giorgina, never giving up, was STILL coming out to the Lighthouse every

At this point, after the celebration for Giorgina and the letter from the President, a whole new set of boulders was mandated to be brought out and set necklace fashion around the base of the cliff to break up the waves and protect the terracing. Furthermore, a man who had been a volunteer for the project Greg Donhue, was hired first by the Coast Guard and later when the Coast Guard handed the keys to the place to the Montauk Historical Society, to guide the project under Giorgina's direction. Today, the terracing is complete and being maintained. And the Lighthouse, with this incredible terracing built by one private citizen and her friends, remains just 55 feet from the edge of the cliff.

Giorgina Reid was born in Trieste and came to America as a young girl. She 'studied textile design in New York and married Donald, another design student she met in school, and they lived together for a long time in Jackson Heights before buying their "summer place" in Rocky Point. They never had children. Donald died in 1991.

In 1989, Giorgina told the incredible story of what one very tiny — four foot eleven — woman could do, in a magazine called Guidepost. They ran a picture of her on the cover.

"When I was a teenager, I worked in the office of then Congressman Fiorello LaGuardia, later the Mayor of New York," Giorgina wrote. "They used to call that feisty, warm hearted man 'Little Flower' because of his first name and because he was just over five feet tall.

"Listen to me,' LaGuardia said one day as we were riding up in the elevator. 'I know what I'm talking about. Trust in God, believe in yourself, and you can do anything.'

"The elevator doors opened and he stepped out. He may be only five feet tall, I thought, but he's a giant of a man."

One last thing. In 1972, five years after the Coast Guard caved in and declared they would help save the Montauk Lighthouse instead of destroy it, I got a call from an aide to the Commander of the Coast Guard on Governor's Island, inviting me and Giorgina there for a luncheon to honor the both of us for the work that we had done. Frankly, at the time, I thought this was a very classy thing for them to do.

Giorgina and I went together. She was almost 70. I was 33. And they took us to the officer's mess, gave us lunch, made speeches, took pictures, and gave us each an award. Mine read (and still does read, I have it in my office), CERTIFICATE OF APPRECIATION. I had pointed out the problem. Giorgina's read CER-TIFICATE OF ACHIEVEMENT. Giorgina had been working, at that point, at the cliff in front of the Lighthouse every Sunday for nearly a decade. And that was the reason for the differ-Giorgina Reid was buried in a cemetery in Calverton last Tuesday. She trusted in God. She believed in herself. And she could do anything. Montauk and the rest of Long Island owe her a huge debt.

She's probably with the Lord now, with Donald, bolstering up Heaven.

By Jill Martin

.Well, for all of us who invested in beach umbrellas this year-joke's on us! What is with this weather? It is time for all of the shopaholics out there (like myself) to invest in comfy pants, cashmere sweaters, and just stay home and read a good book!! (Whatever you do, do not eat cake out of the garbage like Miranda. It's not that bad... the rain has to stop sometime!) Okay, now that that's done...let's go out and about!

Let's begin with Saturday night...dinner. Nick and Toni's (as usual) was the place to be. Author Kurt Vonnegut was there as was NY Giant's Michael Strahan. Chevy Chase and his family were enjoying their meal, as were Martha Stewart and her daughter Alexis. And while Nick and Toni's seemed to be a family restaurant, Pacific East definitely wasn't. Howard Stern and his very beautiful girlfriend Beth Ostrosky (even I think she's beautiful) were doing a little more than eating at their corner table. As they say, get a room! Also at Nick and Toni's was Regis and Kelly's gossip queen Claudia Cohen. Just down the road, at George Martin's, was the very fit Lucille Roberts with legal eagle Dominic Barbera. Author Tom Wolfe was at Plaza Cafe and at 95 School Street, Bill Beutel with friends and the Post's Liz Smith. Socialite Terry Kramer hosted an "intimate" dinner party at her house in East Hampton. Attendees included: Serena Boardman, Fernando Niven, and Alex Siva, to name a few. After the soiree, the crew continued partying at Conscience Point... and Sunday well, like most of you, I barbequed with Dad.

However, we can't leave out the happenings in NYC. The nights were dazzling, to say the least. Thursday night were the Oscars of Fashion; the CFDA Awards at Avery Fisher Hall in Lincoln Center. Attendees: Sean Puffy Combs and his mother Janice, Giselle, Mena Suvari, with host Sandra Bernhardt. There was a performance by Usher (although no one seemed to care) and Diana Ross gave a special award to Bob Mackie. Although the party did not stop when the awards (Continued on next page)

Wednesday July 11, 7pm Living Light REIKI The Usui System of Natural Healing Dr. Robin Lechner

REIKI is a Japanese word: Rei, meaning Universal Life Force, the energy inherent in all creation; Ki, the individual's Life Force, the vital element for one's existence. Reiki integrates the Universal Life force with personal Ki to balance, realign energy and activate the body's natural healing powers.Based upon traditional energy practice, Reiki incorporates the meridian system of energy pathways in the body. Healing energy is channeled through the hands of a practitioner and is transmitted to the area most in need. Dr. Robin Lechner is a Naturopathic Physician, Traditional Reiki Master, Interfaith Minister, Author and creator of Living Whole and Living Light and the Rainbow Bridge. She skillfully synthesizes and blends philosophies and methodologies to bridge Eastern and Western traditions. She is the founder of Living Light Reiki and director of the Center of Living Light. $12 (Center for Well-Being event)

Thursday July 12, 7pm The Pied Piper Must be Paid: Managing Uncontrollable Kids Francesca Muscari

Are you concerned that, as a society, we are losing many of our children to the "Pied Piper" of rage, and "un-controllability"? If so, come to this introductory talk on how you can apply tried and true Becoming a Love and Logic Parent techniques that will help you build a relationship with your child and raise a respectful, responsible, and fun-to-be-with child.

Francesca Muscari has worked in the field of child welfare for the past 26 years, mostly in the field of special needs adoption. As a Becoming a Love and Logic Parent instructor, she uses, in a unique and creative way, the material developed by the Cline/Fay institute. $12 (Center for Well-Being event)

Saturday July 14th, 6pm A Tibetan Healing Path Kathryn Suerth

Drawing from traditional Tibetan healing practices Kathryn's intent is for you to move your consciousness from the gross physical world, through the psycho-drama of the emotional world, towards the in-substantive mind whose qualities are joy, loving kindness, peace and healing. Coming into alignment with our own source energy we are empowered to help others and heal ourselves. $15 (Center for Well-Being event)

Sunday night, for father's day, Robert DeNiro was dining at Bubby's on Hudson Street with his two children. It was a free-night for DeNiro as kids eat free on Sundays and he did not eat a thing! Maybe he was planning to grab a bite across the street at his own restaurant Nobu. Ummm. The more you make the less you pay for! And speaking of big bucks, Donald's girls love to shop! Both Melanie Knauss and Ivana Trump were both shopping separately at Intermix on Madison Avenue spending Donald's dollars! Oh... forgot to tell. This week I ate at The Park on Tenth Avenue. I ran into the very handsome John Enos but more importantly... if you happen to go you must order the artichokes - fabulous!

LET'S COLLECT!

LongHouse Reserve hosted a lecture and showing by Jack Lenor Larsen on how to integrate art collections with personal lifestyles, of which we all know Jack is the master. The well attended event was held at the LongHouse Reserve at 133 Hands Creek Road in East Hampton. If you have never been to LongHouse, make plans to attend one of their future events this season. A visit to the grounds is always a treat to remember.

SONIC CONVERGENCE AT THE ROSS SCHOOL

Text and Photos by Kimberly Goff

On Friday night, June 15th, the Ross School, located at Good Friend Park on Route 114 between East Hampton and Sag Harbor, welcomed a group of extremely fortunate people to view the work of what is being aptly called a global classroom. Thanks to a vision of Courtney Ross Holst and her husband Anders Holst, students and mentors from Sweden, China, and the Ross School collaborated to compose, orchestrate, and perform a musical and visual composition in four acts. The sounds were classical and modern at the same time. They were timely and timeless. The American mentors include Percy Heath, Peter Israelson, Billy Joel, George Litterst, Philip Mallory Jones, and Clark Terry. The conductor was Quincy Jones who credits Clark Terry as his teacher. There was a delicious and elegant dinner after the concert featuing international foods. If you haven't been to the Ross School, it is certainly worth a visit.

Six Couples Maried At The Farmhouse Restaurant Book The Same Night

By Fred Liberman

It was the summer of 2000, a total coincidence. Sometime around 8 p.m., a couple approached me. They looked very familiar, but I didn't know from where. Because it was a Saturday night in the restaurant, I was in a bit of a fog to begin with. I did not, at first, acknowledge that the couple, Phil and Martha, had indeed been married at the Farmhouse the prior Fall. I smiled, happily bought them a glass of champagne, and ran back into the kitchen to help get out the food.

Michael, our GM, came into the kitchen at around 10:00 p.m., and announced that there was a couple at table 41 who had gotten married at the restaurant during our first summer, and asked if I wanted to buy them a drink. When I determined that it was not Phil and Martha, I said sure. It was getting late, and we still had a few more tables to get out. I had time to smile at the coincidence.

I finished in the kitchen, and came into the bar at around 11:00 p.m. Our staff of bartenders, hostesses, and managers were buzzing about something that I assumed didn't concern me. One hostess, Sue Ann, had apparently thought that I knew what they were buzzing about. "Isn't it amazing?" she asked, and wondered why I had such a quizzical look on my face.

"What are you talking about?"

"You don't know?" she asked. She then proceeded to drag me by the arm and escorted me to table 84, a large table in the Pub Room. There sat twelve people- six couples- sitting around the table; laughing, exchanging pleasantries, drinking, and having what seemed to be a great time. Most of them recognized me even though many seemed only somewhat familiar to me, except one couple- who were regulars at the Farmhouse. Included in the group was the couple Phil and Martha, who I had bought the champagne for some hours earlier.

"Isn't this amazing?" announced one very young woman; suntanned and attractive. I was clueless as to what they were talking about, and started playing mind games with myself- hoping to figure out what was going on before they had to tell me. "Help me out here," I whispered to Sue Ann.

"This is an amazing coincidence," offered several of the couples. "We're going to meet here again next summer" said a tall man with an unmistakable Boston

Then it hit me. The New England accent, the couple... the other couple. They must have realized all at once that I caught on as to why they were all together. A huge grin creased my face. They all laughed and smiled that I had figured out why six strange couples were cavorting together in my restaurant as they hoisted their drinks to toast to the Farmhouse. Then, all at once, they started singing: "For he's a jolly good fellow ..." and I turned beet

I carefully wrote down all of the names and addresses of the couples, and promised to send invitations for all of them to have dinner next year. Don't ask how this happened, but all six couples (all strangers until 30 minutes earlier) had been married at the Farmhouse. During that very night, at the Farmhouse, they celebrated their weddings.

Michael was the one who had finally put it all together: that sitting throughout the restaurant were six unrelated couples who all had been married at different times under our roof. It was Martha's idea to introduce them all to each other and Sue Ann's idea to sit them at a table to have some drinks- on us of course.

"It would be great" mused my wife, "if this becomes an annual affair. This is what the Farmhouse is all

The Groom Can Get The Bride Treatment Too

By Jesse Scaccia

In trying to put together a wedding, often the little things are forgotten. The disc jockey doesn't get the song list. Nobody tells the caterer about that lactose intolerant cousin on the bride's side. There's something old, something new, something borrowed, but nothing blue. And then there's the, what's his name? Oh, the groom.

To give the groom the special treatment he deserves, send him to Style Bar Day Spa in Sag Harbor for a day of pampering. There he will receive what they call "A Full Day of Style." The day starts off with a spa manicure and pedicure. This is followed by a stylish European facial and a full body massage.

"If your bride to be is getting all the special attention, why not you?" says Perrie Gurfein, owner of the salon. Grooms everywhere would agree.

"Everyone gets their own personal treatment," she says. "They get their own robes, slippers, European showers, we get our food catered from local restaurants, serve Mimosas and white wine. It becomes an experience."

For the grooms out there who feel like going to a spa is only for ladies, Ms. Gurfein feels their opinion will change as soon as they lie down on the massage table. "I think the men appreciate it more than the women do!" she says, "It really makes them feel special."

Most of the time, the bride and groom to be come in together. The Style Bar features couples massages, where the happy couple lay side by side and receive the same massage. Desire Martaron, a specialist for the spa, says that, "The couples come in and relax, they talk, and most of the time they end up falling asleep."

The entire marriage process can be just as stressful for the groom as for the bride. By taking some time out to give the groom his share of the spotlight, the entire process can be a lot more fun.

Let's not make the mistake of forgetting the woman of the hour.

As nice as it would be, there isn't any time to send her to the spa on her wedding day. So why not have the spa come to her? Though it sounds a little far fetched, one local spa has the ability to make it happen. Style Bar can bring anything they have at the spa to a bride's home or reception location. "We have portable everything," says Desire Martaron, one member of the team of certified specialists who go on every house call. "We have portable pedicure stations, foot massage basins, manicure supplies, steamers, massage tables, and high frequency machines for killing bacteria" among the van load of supplies that accompany them.

Having a full working spa come to the bride on the day of her wedding makes one of the most beautiful days of her life even more beautiful. "It's her big day," Ms. Martaron says. "We all want to make her happy and for her to look her best. We treat her like a queen."

"Most brides are so keyed up, nervous, and panicky on their wedding day," says Perrie Gurfein. "It relaxes them to be able to stay at home with all their stuff."

It sounds like it is almost as fun for the people from Style Bar to help the bride as it is for the bride herself. "It's great," Ms. Martaron says, "With all the excitement and energy it makes it fun to be a part of."

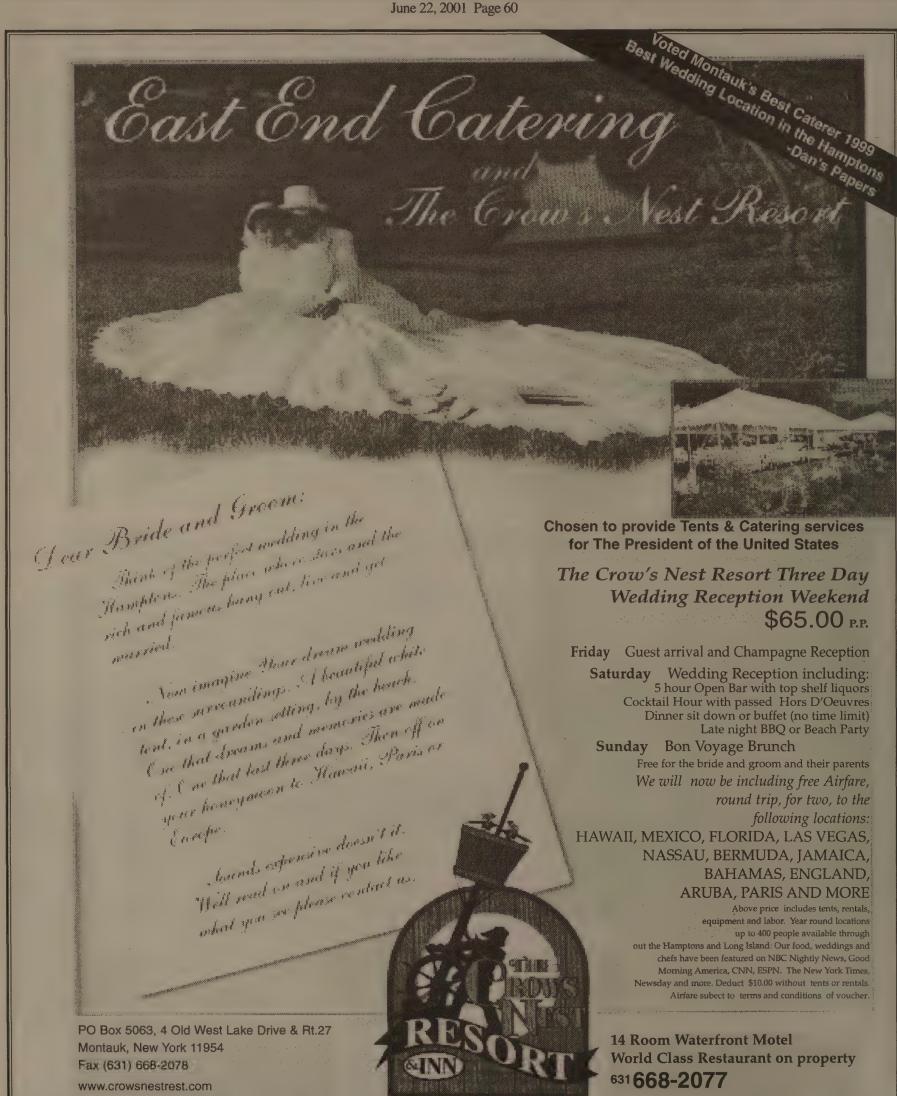

Style Bar Day Spa makes hundreds of house visits over the course of the summer. Many of these visits are on yachts in the bay along Sag Harbor or for photo shoots.

The Style Bar Day Spa is located on One Bay Street in Sag Harbor. For more information call (631) 725-6730 or check out their web site at www.stylebarspa.com.

"Gurney's Inn: Where Anything You Can Imagine Comes to Life"

By Kirk Cassels
What could be a more romantic setting for your wedding than the beach? Imagine the feel of the sand between your toes as the heavenly semi-circular sun, with its rays of orange, red, yellow, and gold, trickles itself slowly into the crisp ocean. As you gaze at your future life companion, the gentle rush of the tide is more soothing than you could imagine. Only you, your love, and your guests are there because you are at The Gurney's Inn and their 1000 feet of private sandy beach.

This is only one of the many extravagant elements of The Gurney's Inn that will make your wedding a true paradise.

Built into a cliff that over looks the ocean, the Inn offers cinematic views for your photographer, or for you to gaze out of as the morning sun rises before you. What goes better with such a view than strawberries, crackers and cheese, and champagne? You can have all of this and more as you settle in at the Crow's Nest, a one bedroom cottage house that is perfect for honeymoon getaways.

Certainly, The Gurney's Inn is ideal for a wedding and the following celebrations. The inn's spa is just as heavenly as its view and setting. Unlike any other spa on the island and beyond, the Gurney's Inn offers a sea water spa. Take note, this is not a salt-water spa, but a SEA water spa.

Resting close to the inn is a pure sea water spring. After it filters through, the water delicately flows into a sea water bath. The king-size pool of seawater is referred to as the Roman baths. Grooms and brides can swim in the heated lagoon of seawater as they bask in the refreshing waterfalls.

After a cleansing swim, the soon to be newlyweds can lay back and experience a full pampering. Settled in beautiful brown soft stone and marble, the brand new salon of the Gurney's Inn is the perfect place for a bride and her bridesmaids to get manicures, pedicures, facials, and more. While the special lady gets her special attention, her future hubby will love the experience of a full body scrub or a hot stone massage. The result of the pampering is as exquisite as the experience, as both bride and groom will be fresh and beautiful for the big day. Keep in mind, along with this pampering is the continuously heavenly view, and did I forget to mention the champagne and fruit?

For anyone looking, literally, for everything they need for the wedding, they needn't look far. The Gurney's Inn, located on 290 Old Montauk Highway in Montauk, offers everything from the honeymoon getaway cottage to a magnificent weight room that overlooks the ocean for the groom to buff up for his bride. According to Ingrid Lemme, the public relations and marketing director, The Gurney's Inn has "anything you could possibly imagine."

I Cannot Get Married! I Don't Have Anything To Wear!

By Chandi Neubauer

The wedding had only a month to go. I had no gown, no bridesmaids, and no trousseau. Whatever is a bride to do when faced with such a great snafu? All of the stores exclaimed, "No way!" Josephine said, "Come in today! We'd love to see you. There is no hurry. It will all be perfect. So please, don't worry."

Throwing the wedding of your dreams is never easy. What should I wear? How many dresses will I have to try on before I find "The One?" Will my bridesmaids still be my friends after they see their dresses? Will they ever wear them again? (I don't think so)

You probably remember her stunning wedding in the pages of Martha Stewart Living Magazine, or perhaps you've visited one of the stores. Josephine Sasso has been designing dresses for 20 years. Her silhouettes combine classic styling with modern touches, making them essential for every well-dressed bridal party. With options for brides, bridesmaids, mothers, and casual wear, Josephine Sasso can please any woman of taste.

Once you've selected your silhouette, the real fun begins, choosing your fabric. Brocades, laces, satins, taffetas, piques, and so forth, the perfect ensemble is finally within reach.

If you have a month or more on your hands, you can have the dress of your dreams. According to Josephine, "The bride should feel comfortable and confident in her gown." Josephine Sasso minimizes frustrations with her unique silhouette system. A bride can choose from several gowns and a variety of separates to get the perfect look. The silhouettes can be altered to achieve an absolutely custom fit as the bride desires.

The rising popularity of separates for bridesmaids' attire is evident in Sasso's collection. Skirts come in aline and straight styles as well as a variety of innovative, yet classic shapes. The new side-shirred wrap skirt has been a hit for bridal parties this season, and is quickly becoming a classic at parties around town. The fishtail style skirt hugs curves and flares at the bottom ending in a short train. Josephine Sasso's tops are available in style to flatter every figure. My personal favorites are the strapless bustier top and the scoop neck tank. The boning and perfect slim fit allow me to attend parties feeling confident and elegant. Sasso also offers a unique wrap top that many ladies select as bridesmaids and wear again for parties. Its exquisite design allows you to be wrapped in any number of ways. When worn one way, the top comes to a high square neck with a lovely v-shaped back. Ladies can tie the top either in the front or in the back, adding to the drama.

Many brides channel all of their energy into finding the perfect gown, and they forget that there is life beyond the wedding. A wellthought-out trousseau will make your honeymoon heaven on earth. Josephine Sasso offers several choices of toile this season that is sure to delight. In dresses, tops, or capris, toile allows every woman a little taste of the French countryside. I have often asked myself, "Is anything lovelier than lace pants?" The answer is, obviously, no. I invested in my first pair two months ago, and they still make me giddy. I selected black handspun French lace over a black lining and I must say they are truly stunning. You can select from a variety of laces and countless linings to create your own perfect pair of elegant pants.

If you know exactly what you are looking for, or even if you have no idea, you must take a look at Josephine Sasso's stunning collection. Josephine and her charming sales assistants will help to make your wedding as effortless and elegant as possible. While dresses can be made within a month, the preferred lead time is three months, or more. Stop into either location: 226 East 78th Street (between Second and Third Avenue) New York, Suburban Square 37 Coulter Avenue Ardmore Pannsylvania, or visit the website www.josephinesasso.com.

Planning Your Event At The Westhampton Day Spa

By Naomi Parker

You're engaged! It's time to take a deep breath and reflect, and what better way than a date at Westhampton Day Spa. We encourage the bride and groom to devote time to their skin well before the happy event. Most skin care efforts take at least six weeks for great results.

What about the bridal shower? At Westhampton Day Spa, we offer a wide array of services perfect for a "Bridal Spa Party."

The Rehearsal: Try to make this as stress free as possible. Enjoy a bride's day at the Westhampton Day Spa to look and feel beautiful and relaxed. Then, delegate any last minute tasks and try to remember this for your wedding, not a production. Everything doesn't always go as planned, so be prepared to roll with the punches.

The Rehearsal Dinner: Don't ignore the rest of the wedding party. Smile and be gracious. This is your time to thank those around you for all their support and assistance. Westhampton Day Spa gift certificates are the perfect way to show your appreciation and great for having your attendants looking and feeling great for your wedding day.

The Wedding Day: Get some rest! Your day will be so full of family, friends and festivities that you'll barely have a minute to catch your breath. A good night's sleep will do wonders for your patience level and stamina. It is recommended that you start your day with a massage to relax you and give you that wedding glow. Consider including mother of the bride and future mother-in-law in your wedding day appointments so that they can look and feel their best. On site professional make-up application and hair design are recommended to keep the day as organized and relaxed as possible. You need to not only look great, but you also need to feel great.

Holly Torres followed her ear to begin her career as a Hampton based make-up artist and esthetician. Today, with over eighteen years of experience from New York City to the Hamptons specializing in weddings, Bar Mitzvah and spa parties, Holly continues to work her magic as a skin care specialist using only the most advanced natural skin care and make-up available. Now, she is proud to introduce her newly designed Westhampton Day Spa where mind, body and soul become one. Holly and her licensed and trained staff look forward to serving you.

The Westhampton Day Spa is open year round for personalized spa services, bridal primping, corporate gifts or princess spa birthday parties. Call for information and reservation at 631-325-8624.

Who Needs a Private Jeweler? You Do.

By Chandi Neubauer

I searched five years for the perfect diamond cross. Dainty, petite, unique, elegant - I went everywhere, and no one had the right one. I'd given up hope completely when I met Joseph Knight at a Sotheby's After giddily exploring the fine auction preview. collection of Old Master drawings up for auction in the coming week, we discussed our livelihoods. I wondered what being a private jeweler entailed, and I seized the opportunity to ask about crosses. Over the next few months, I came to know Joseph Knight as a jeweler and a friend. After a tireless search, Mr. Knight finally decided to take the matter into his own hands and create one for me based on an incredible Edwardian design. Well, after five years I took the plunge, and I am delighted with the result. People the best places to go for estate jewelry, modern pieces, stop me at least twice a day to compliment my lovely diamond cross, and I have never seen its equal.

What can I say? I've found my perfect jeweler (it's much easier than finding the perfect husband).

Ah, jewelry... What girl does not fantasize about her engagement ring? I admit that I do. At the moment, I am thinking, classic, elegant, different, perhaps an estate piece. When the time comes, I have no doubt that my jeweler will find the perfect ring for me. In an ideal world, we would all know

Dressing The Day

By Bea Piccola

One of the most important decisions a bride has to make for her wedding day, after choosing her groom to be, is choosing her wedding gown. No matter when she marries, every woman wants to walk down the aisle in the dress of her dreams. While that dream is entirely hers to conjure up, a few guidelines can help make her search a snap.

In addition to the traditional princess dress, the bride has a host of fashion forward choices featuring sleek silhouettes. A woman can dare to be distinctive with sexy sparkle and body-conscious gowns. She can also opt for the glorious ballgown of her childhood fantasies or move in a more modern direction with an alluring

A bride is not a queen without her crown. Whether she wears a mantilla, floating short veils, tiara, or a sprinkle of flowers in her hair, a headpiece will draw attention to her face when she is wearing a light color. This will help balance the dominance of her gown.

Creating a color scheme for a wedding may not be rocket science, but it does take some thought. Not all bridesmaids were created equal- at least in size. Though color can be a key to a united party front, the bridesmaid's silhouettes don't have to be the same. Whether it's a strapless silk column or a taffeta ball gown with rustling petticoats, each attendant should wear a dress that compliments her shape.

Whether silk, satin, or lace, much of what goes into a wedding gown is pure emotion. Whenever she finds true love- the bride should choose a dress that fulfills her dreams.

Farm Bureau Director Joseph Gergela Speaks Out

By Susan Simm

Of all the topics to become the center of a blistering controversy, farming would, at first, seem to be well down the list. Well, times have changed and so has the focus of a brewing storm over how to preserve what is left of our dwindling farmland. Joseph Gergela, Executive Director of the Long Island Farm Bureau, represents those who have farmed family land for generations. He can truly be called 'a friend of the farmer.' And these days, farmers can use all the friends and support they can muster!

Following is a recent interview with Mr. Gergela during which he answers direct and sometimes difficult questions concerning hot topics here on the North Fork.

Susan Simm: Is representing the needs and desires of the agricultural community as a whole, on both a local and political level, one of the primary objectives of Long Island Farm Bureau?

Joe Gergela: The Long Island Farm Bureau is a non-governmental, grass-roots advocacy organization run in a democratic fashion representing the majority position of member families. Policy development begins locally, where issues are articulated and discussed during the summer months, then voted on in the form of resolutions at our October annual meeting (this same procedure occurs in every county of the state). State resolutions are then submitted to the New York Farm Bureau to be considered and voted on at the State Annual Meeting in December. This process is again repeated at the federal level. Once any issue becomes policy, we are beholden to abide by it and represent it to government and to the general public as well.

On a local level, issues are dealt with on a town-by-town basis with the use of local affairs committees. Our members in a particular town help make local policy decisions along with the town's government and community representatives. In this way, we have direct input into each community. Farm Bureau is non-partisan and does not endorse any political candidates, Our staff are professional lobbyists.

Simm: What is the current consensus among the ag community in regard to the amount of support (non-monetary) they receive from their non-ag neighbors?

Gergela: It is our belief that local residents have a good understanding of farmers and farm issues. They have been outspokenly supportive most times and wish to see our industry continue to thrive. When we run into problems, it is usually with neighbors new to the area. They are unfamiliar with and less accepting of the very fact that farms create noise, odor, dust, etc. They are drawn here because of the charming rural setting, open space and spectacular views, but not until they settle on the East End do they fully consider and comprehend all that farming entails.

Simm: Right now, the 5-acre zoning issue in Southold Town is being hotly debated. Where does LIFB stand?

Gergela: This issue is indeed a volatile one. Farm Bureau staunchly believes that farmers should not be required to shoulder the burden alone for the vistas enjoyed by the general public here on Eastern Long Island. Preservation of our resources should benefit the public without harming the economic position of the agricultural industry.

rights and conservation easements as tools to preserve open space?

Gergela: Traditionally, local towns and counties have not offered enough money for farmland development rights. The position to sell is an individual business decision; a farmer will sell when and if he is ready to do so. Every farm family has different goals and objectives. When the choice has been made to give. up active farming, that is when the issue of PDR (purchasing of development rights) most often comes into play. Farmers don't want to see the loss of farmland and open space any more than you do, but they are entitled to be justly compensated for the true value of their land.

Farm Bureau believes in our constitutional private property rights and takes this very seriously. People should be entitled to reasonable use of their land within local law and zoning codes. We support voluntary preservation programs including but not limited to: PDR, transfer of development rights and conservation easements. In fact, LIFB has lobbied at the local, state and federal level of government and was instrumental in organizing a statewide Preservation Program. In 1996, FB assisted the federal government in writing the Farmland Protection Program. We have lobbied for funding of these programs side by side with many of the environmental groups.

Simm: Speaking of environmental groups, some farmers have become disenchanted with these special interest groups because they don't seem to consider farmers' needs and interests when proposing ways to 'save farmland.' Please comment.

Gergela: Environmental groups advocate for their particular cause, such as open space, clean water, etc. We agree with these public policy issues. Where we differ is in the process of achieving these goals. FB believes that if it is for the public good, then the public should help pay for it. For example, getting back to large lot zoning: it unfairly burdens the farmer and ultimately comes out of his pocket. Knowing full well the end result is for public consumption. This burden is not equitably shared throughout the community, as farmers are (usually) the owners of the largest land parcels.

Overall, while we agree with the environmental community, we support voluntary incentives rather than a regulatory, punitive approach. There may be times when a regulatory approach seems warranted only after a voluntary incentive-based approach has been demonstrated not to have been successful in obtaining the desired results.

"We stand firm on our position of voluntary land protection techniques. This is the only way to preserve the business of farming.

Large lot zoning will only accelerate the loss of farmland and hinder a farmer's equity position as he looks to finance improvements, equipment and future crops. The practice of up zoning reduces the value of that property.

Let it be said that farmers want to farm. Many of our member families have been doing just that for generations. When he makes a profit, he has no need to sell his land to developers. The town's concerns for density reduction and resource protection are not compatible with modern farming. We stand firm on our position of voluntary land protection techniques. This is the only way to preserve the business of farming.

Simm: What about the selling of development

As of this writing, everyone who is in the wine industry here on the East End and even many who aren't have heard about and developed opinions regarding restaurateur Ted Conklin's proposed rating system for Long Island wines.

While in some cases tempers have flared, the system does have its supporters. The problems seem to arise more from confusion about the system, caused at least in part by an article in the New York Times by wine critic Frank Prial, rather than outright disagreement. Where the problems exist, it seems like a case where a little misinformation (or maybe interpretation) has gone a long way.

Ted Conklin has owned the American Hotel in Sag Harbor for 30 years and has more than 150 Long Island wines on his restaurant's famed 9-page list. A long time observer of the local wine industry, Mr. Conklin feels that he's qualified to propose a new classification system.

"One of the constraints I put on myself was to focus on boutique-size wineries. They have been the most quality-driven segment of the wine industry on the East End," said Mr. Conklin. "The initial article by Frank Prial was confusing. He misinterpreted some elements of the 20-page document that substantiated and explained the rankings."

One of the more contoversial aspects of this confusion was Dr. Daminos' reaction. According to Mr. Prial's article, the owner of Pindar and Duck Walk Vineyards interprets the system as being insulting to Pindar, in particular. Damianos, who didn't return phone calls for comment, apparently resented his winery's designation as "commercial."

"It was never my intention to engender an aggressive reponse by using the word 'commercial," said Mr. Conklin. "I didn't dismiss him as commercial, he is commercial according to his license. It's a legal definition." And as far as Mr. Prial claiming that Mr. Conklin put Pindar in "the lowest" category, Mr. Conklin said, "Either for editorial purposes or simply because he misunderstood, Mr. Prial apparently told Dr. Damianos that Pindar was rated in the commercial or 'lowest catagory.' It just happened to be at bottom of a page in my report!"

Mr. Conklin went on to explain that Pindar wasn't included in his classification system because it was "like comparing apples and oranges." Pindar produces so much more wine than the other wineries that it didn't seem appropriate to include them in his classification of what he calls boutique-sized operations.

Although Jim Tresize of the New York Wine & Grape Foundation said that Mr. Conklin's proposal "drew less than an enthusiatic response from the East End industry," several winery owners and winemakers are "delighted."

"We are delighted that the growth of the North Fork wine region has become so significant that rating systems are now important and necessary," said John Perry, Senior Vice President of Marketing at Gallucio Estate Vineyards and

What's In Store: The Down Home Store

By Susan Simm

Everyone driving past the Down Home Store on the Main Road in Cutchogue during its business hours notices something unique: the bears. Bears? These grizzlies are not only harmless, they're fuzzy and welcoming, each with a paw in the air. They are also for sale and so, while there are often two or even three waving from the porch, on some occasions there is a lone bear guarding

Today, a whole family of bears greets me at the doorway along with their smiling owner, Terry Hofer. Terry is warm and outgoing, obviously a people person. "The bears have been around since Elaine had the store," she said. "There are some people who don't stop by because they feel that the bears are representative of what's inside. But there are also people who come by because of the bears." Go figure!

Elaine is Elaine McDuffee, who opened the shop in 1991. Terry came aboard as manager in 1995 and recalls the store in the early years. "It was very rustic in the beginning," she said. Originally filled with twig furniture and such, it began evolving under Elaine's ownership into the gift and furnishings destination it is today.

Terry, who grew up in Jamesport after moving east with her family from the city, hadn't been involved with retail before taking over the business. Having previously worked for Estee Lauder at Saks in Southampton, Terry, who has two children, "just fell in love with the business. I had spent so many years painting, wallpapering and decorating my own house. With the shop, I discovered an outlet for my creativity that was a lot more rewarding. At home, let's face it, I had a limited - although occasionally enthusiastic - audience!"

After working and traveling with Elaine for two and a half years, "Elaine decided that she didn't want to do it anymore and said that she was just going to close the doors unless I wanted to buy the business," said Terry. This was in 1997. "I had to think pretty hard because I knew how much was involved. My kids, who were 15 and 13 at the time, promised to help me out but, of course, they didn't. Luckily I didn't factor that into my final decision!"

Although Terry looks at Down Home as a gift and home furnishings store, she is reluctant to categorize her shop. "We try not to be classified as a country store because our inventory is very eclectic. For instance, we have folk pieces, but they're sophisticated folk pieces. We try to stock something for everyone, whether you come in to spend $20 on a gift or $1400 for a sideboard."

Currently shopping for merchandise in the greater New York and New Jersey areas as well as Pennsylvania, Terry looks for things that people have asked for. Each year, she travels a little farther in search of items that keep the store fresh and different.

"We get deliveries almost every day," said Terry, "so the store is continually changing. It looks different from week to week. We try to tell people, without being overbearing, that if they really like a one-of-a-kind item, grab it because it may be gone when you return."

Speaking of one-of-a-kind, take the bench we are sitting on outside the shop today. It is sold. "People who were here measuring will come back for it and it will be gone," said Terry. This can be frustrating but also keeps the store exciting. People come in hunting for something they liked and it will either be moved, if they're lucky, or gone if they're not.

Books are big (and beautiful) here. "We have quite a following of people who love our books. This area is one of my loves and I've expanded on our department," said Terry. Expect to find interesting titles such as At Home with the Past, A Gift from the Sea, Tiffany's Table Manners for Teenagers, How to be a Gentleman as well as Ina Garten's (Barefoot Contessa, East Hampton) cookbooks and the Cordon Bleu cookbook series. No matter the gift sought or the occasion, you will find just the right book here at Down Home.

The store's clientele is approximately one third repeat customers, one third tourists and one third local and second homeowners seeking gifts or imaginative furnishings, such as a fabulous garden bench made from an antique metal bed available as of this writing.

Has business been affected by the economic forecasts of doom and gloom? "I don't think that it's had a negative impact on us," said Terry. "We give very personal service, we wrap and we really care about what our customers are looking for. People still need to buy gifts and, more importantly, they need that shot in the arm, even when things are tight. You still need a place to go to pick up your spirits. Winery. "We value any form of rating system that educates the public and brings attention to our growing wine industry."

Channing Daughter's winemaker Larry Perrine said, "We are a young winery still selling our second and third vintages. We are happy to be included in Ted Conklin's winery classification as one of the new wineries with a bright future." He added, "We respect Ted Conklin's expertise... and appreciate highly his loyalty to the Long Island wine industry.

Alex Macari of Macari Vineyards and Winery in Mattituck has mixed feelings. "It's wonderful to have someone interested in Long Island wines, but unfortunately the facts seem to be incorrect. Macari Vineyards was started in 1994 and is a 100% estate winery. We produced and bottled our first vintage in 1996. We have always employed a qualified enologist and viticulturalist to maintain our vineyard," she said. "Therefore, we do not believe that we are transitional and emerging... we have already emerged and are Roman Roth, general manager and winemaker, feels that "the rating system is a great idea," he said, "but for it to be a really reliable guide it needs to be thought out thoroughly. Like great wines, great ideas also need to mature.

According to a statement released by the Long Island Wine Council, "Mr. Prial's article suggests a ranking system for Long Island wine. Responding to this, Jane Baxter Lynn, executive director of the Council, said 'Long Island is being increasingly recognized as a premium wine producing region. This is reflected in the growing interest in and demand for our wine. Consumers are judging the quality and value of our wines by the awards they are winning nationally and what they are tasting in the glass, not by who owns which winery or other historical data.

'Ratings of individual wines can be helpful to consumers. However, ranking of establishments does not reflect the quality of wines as they are presented in the glass, which is what counts."

Fun Food at Funcho's

My husband came home from work the other day and said, "Susan, there is this new little Mexican restaurant in Riverhead that we should check out." I was skeptical, to say the least. Eastern Suffolk has about as many good Mexican restaurants as luxury hotels. Well, was I in for a surprise. Funcho's Fajita Grill serves fun, delicious and authentic Mexican food, not an Americanized version.

Alfredo and Janice Zavala, the owners of Funcho's got tired of working as dental lab technicians and decided to try their hand at the restaurant business. Al had worked at Applebee's in Hauppauge for five years bartending as a side job, so the restaurant business was not unfamiliar terrain for him. Besides, Al's mother taught him some of the family recipes from their Peruvian background. After finding an ad in Newsday for a small restaurant for rent in Riverhead, they decided to go for it. "I always talked about doing this, but I wouldn't have gotten this far if Janice didn't get me going. She is the backbone of this place," said Al.

We went to the orange, purple and lime-colored restaurant on West Main Street unannounced on a steamy Saturday afternoon and were greeted and treated like old friends. The restaurant was formerly Max's Hamburgers several years ago and, more recently, a pizza place had opened and closed in the same location.

We ordered a few of Al's specialties, including the FunchoTaco, which is a huge taco with the regular accompaniments and a Funchadilla, Al's version of a quesadilla with beans, corn, avocados, two cheeses, and a choice of steak or chicken. Both were sensational. The portions are big, so don't be fooled by the reasonable prices, but do save a little room for the super homemade salsa, guacamole and warm chips.

Also delicious and different was the El Carbonaro, shredded beef in a wrap with rice, tomatoes, pesto and a wonderful lime dressing. It is an interesting change of pace and the lime and pesto really work well together.

Besides the food that we sampled, Funcho's also makes nachos (which we saw another customer order and they looked terrific), various burritos, wraps and, of course, fajitas. They also make taco salads and vegetarians have lots of choices as meat is almost always optional.

Funcho's has seats inside along with an outside dining area. Inside, the south of the border style, complete with cactus and burnt wood tables and chairs, feels warm and homey and you can smell the food being prepared. Outside, there are tables on a grassy area next to the restaurant with umbrellas. After ordering, the food is delivered on trays out to your table on paper plates. Because of the large portions, use the tray to bring the inevitable leftovers back to be wrapped up to take home.

If you are still hungry (which is hard to imagine) or have a sweet tooth, the Snowflake Ice Cream Shop is right next door. Funcho's takes orders in advance so if you are passing through Riverhead, call ahead, and Al and Janice will prepare your order for pickup when you arrive.

The food is great, the atmosphere fun. So if you are hungry some night on your way out to Cutchogue, or East Hampton for that matter, take the last exit on the Expressway and head to Funcho's Fajita Grill to eat in or take-out (call in advance and your food will be waiting). They are open Tuesday-Thursday from 11 a.m.-9 p.m., Friday and Saturday from 11 a.m.-10 p.m., Sunday from noon-8 p.m. Closed Mondays. Funcho's: terrific Mexican food on Long Island west of the Shinnecock Canal.

The Weakfish: Long Island's Aquatic Peacock

After winter has finally released its icy grip on Long Island and you've gotten the boat in the water and rigged up for the fishing season, spring is in the air and the lilacs are in bloom. This annual blooming of the fragrant purplr flowers is the age-old signal that the weakfish should be arriving after their spring migration from their wintering grounds. You stop at the local bait and tackle shop for some squid or a few sand worms and head out to your favorite weakfish spot. You select your favorite weakfish lure and send the bait down. Soon, you feel the line tighten up and let out a little slack. When there is a firm but definite tug, you bring the rod up, set the hook and reel in a beautiful 8-pound Long Island weakfish!

Weakfish is a Long Island Favorite

The weakfish, Cynocsion regalis, is a favorite among Long Island anglers. Its range extends from Southern Florida to Nova Scotia, however it is most abundant between North Carolina and New York. It truly is one of the most beautiful fish found in Long Island waters, with a dark olive green color along the top of its body. The sides are silvery white and have metallic hints of gold, copper, blue, purple and green. Spotting on the scales adds to the overall appearance of an aquatic peacock. Its dorsal and tail fins are a dusky grey color and the pelvic and anal fins are yellow. Weakfish are also distinguished from other fish by the presence of a pair of canine-like teeth present at the tip of the upper jaw.

The name 'weakfish' derives from the fact that the lower jaw is very weak and has a tendency to separate from the skull when the fish is hooked in this location. Inexperienced anglers often loose such fish if care is not taken when landing them. Patience and finesse are definitely a must for catching weaks. Weakfish are also known as "seatrout" and "weaks".

Weakfish Spawn in May and June

After overwintering on the continental shelf off the coasts of Virginia and North Carolina, weakfish move inshore and north along the coast to spawn as water temperatures warm in the spring Weakfish spawn in the ocean near major inlets or within bays and estuaries. Peak spawning occurs from May through July along the Atlantic coast and this is best time to fish for them. Weakfish reach reproductive maturity at one year of age and, because of differences in growth rates along its range, the size of a one-year old fish in North Carolina is smaller than a fish the same age in New York. Male and female weakfish in North Carolina become mature at approximately 7 and 9 inches respectively, while fish in New York mature at a size of approximately 10 inches.

The number of eggs that females produce is also different for northern and southern fish. A 19- inch female from North Carolina produces over two million eggs while a female of the same size from New York can produce only 300,000 eggs. The reason for this could be the greater amount of energy that is expended by fish migrating to New York compared to fish migrating to North Carolina. In other words, the fish that spawns in New York has to travel further from the overwintering areas than the fish that spawns in North Carolina and expends more energy to get there.

A World To Explore

If you have ever gone snorkeling in the Peconic Bay, it's a good bet that you noticed most of the bay bottom tends to be cobble, sand, and mud dotted with the occasional seaweed-covered rocks. Within the bay, there also exist areas that provide an incredible opportunity to observe a tremendous variety of marine life. These areas are eelgrass beds, also known as meadows.

In our bay, eelgrass beds grow in relatively shallow water (less than 12 feet) and were once common throughout the Peconic Estuary. Today, there are not many beds left in the estuary, but the beds that remain still teem with life. One of the more important members of the eelgrass community is the bay scallop. The scallop is the silent sentry of the beds, constantly on the lookout for danger with its sixty little blue eyes. Hard clams or quahogs can be found buried around the roots of the eelgrass and can easily be missed if one does not look carefully. Horseshoe, green, hermit, blue and lady crabs are also common in the beds, but they may be hard to spot as they bury themselves at the first sign of danger. If one looks closely at the base of eelgrass shoots, you may find brittle stars foraging for food, or the dark, lacy tentacles of a buried sea cucumber. And still other animals (worms, shellfish, etc.) are hidden on, among, and under the eelgrass.

Shellfish and invertebrates also share residency of the eelgrass beds with a variety of fish. It is common to encounter eelgrass' namesake, the American eel, silently gliding snakelike through the grass. Camouflage is a common tactic among the blades of eelgrass and there is no better example than the Northern pipefish. The pipefish will freeze in place and pretend to be a piece of eelgrass, maintaining the act until it is prodded, then swimming off. One of the more rare and amazing sights can be observed in the spring, when male three-spine stickleback fish begin their mating rituals and build a nest out of eelgrass or seaweed for their mate. Atlantic silversides and killifish are quick to investigate any disturbance of the bottom in search of food. Mid to late summer finds smaller bluefish schooling over eelgrass beds and hunting the baitfish that hide in the blades.

In all, eelgrass beds are a great place to explore and (Continued on page 78)

This leaves the fish that spawn in New York less energy for reproduction, so they produce less eggs than the fish that spawn in North Carolina.

During the spawning season, weakfish spawn daily, which is initiated at dusk. Males participate in courtship behavior which involves making a drumming sound by vibrating special muscles along the sides of their bodies. It is believed that drumming is used to attract females, and/or helps in the formation of spawning aggregations. Males remain stationary at the bottom while drumming. When a female passes nearby, the male nudges her to see if she is receptive. If so, they form a spawning pair, and swim toward the surface to release eggs and sperm into the water column, after which the male will resume drumming, until another female comes along.

Weakfish Larvae use Tides to Stay in Estuaries Weakfish eggs are approximately 0.04 inches in size, and float in the water column.

Hatching occurs in 36 to 40 hours at 69EF, and larvae are 0.06 inches in length. The larvae remain in the water column and feed on copepods and other zooplankton. The length of the larval period varies depending upon how successful the larvae are at capturing food. Researchers have shown that larvae selectively utilize tidal circulation patterns to ensure that they remain within estuaries. To do this, the larvae migrate up in the water column during flood tide and down in the water column during ebb tide, taking advantage of the characteristics of estuarine tidal circulation to prevent being swept out of the estuary during ebb tide. Exactly how the larvae know when and where to migrate are poorly understood.

When the larvae reach a size of approximately 0.3 inches, they begin a benthic existence during which time, they gradually develop into the juvenile stage. As juveniles, weakfish are found primarily in the deeper areas of estuaries rather than the shallower areas inhabited by many juvenile fishes. As an estuarine fish, juvenile weakfish are found at varying salinity, from 12 ppt. near the head of estuaries to 31 ppt. near the mouth of estuaries. Newly hatched juveniles migrate up-estuary to lower salinity areas and later move downestuary as they grow. Researchers have found that areas with lower salinity are not optimal for rapid growth of juveniles. However, these areas may provide refuge from predators that are more common in higher salinity areas. In the fall, young of the year range from 4 to 7 inches in size. As water temperatures cool, juveniles in the northern end of the range, migrate out of estuaries to overwinter in southern waters. The following spring, they return as adults to spawn.

Weakfish Feed Between Dusk and Dawn

Juvenile weakfish feed on mysid shrimp, sand shrimp, and amphipods, while adults feed primarily on sand shrimp, sand eels, silversides, and bay anchovies. Weakfish are visual predators, and feed primarily between dusk and dawn. The pair of large canine-like teeth in the upper jaw aid in grasping larger, swimming prey. Adult fish prefer shallow, sandy areas and will forage along the edge of seagrass beds. Juvenile weakfish in turn are preyed upon by predatory birds, bluefish, fluke, striped bass and even adult weakfish. Adult weakfish are preyed upon primarily by humans as weakfish support commercial and recreational fisheries throughout their range.

The oldest weakfish ever caught was 17-years old, on record, but it is rare that many live this long. A 30 inch long weakfish is approximately 11 years old, although most fish caught are less than six years old. A 16 inch fish is three years old. Studies have shown that longevity and age-specific size of weakfish has varied historically possibly due to changes in environmental conditions. These fluctuations appear to vary with abundance. During periods of high abundance, weakfish reach greater age and size than during periods of low abundance.

On the Cover

Photo by Ginger Propper Chris Whittle has spent much of his life finding ways to better educate school children. He founded the Edison Schools, a for-profit organization, in the belief that the private sector might better educate than the public school system. Now, more than 100 schools in a dozen cities are under contract to Edison. The results - improved grades and enthusiastic parents and students - speak for themselves. He is photographed here with his wife Priscilla Ratazzi on the front lawn of their home overlooking Georgica Pond in East Hampton. They are joined by their faithful Golden Retriever.

Dear readers

In this issue, you will meet for the first time, in our pages anyway, the two young women, high school kids really, who are about to become major supermodels and celebrities of the future. They are Nicki and Paris Hilton, the daughters of Rick and Kathy Hilton, and the future may just be minutes away because Paris will grace the cover of the next issue of GQ. They also have a perfume coming out, and can a line of clothing and a TV series be far behind? We expect they will appear in many more issues of SouthoftheHighway.

Elsewhere in this issue, we feature an incredible award winning house by architect Preston Phillips, (do they really come knocking on your door to see the inside of award winning houses?), an episode of the Sampsons with a clueless limo driver, a photo portrait of Peter Max in his studio, and a profile of Robin Dubin, the woman who, as Administrator of the Rudin Foundation, hands out millions of dollars to needy charities around the world.

Also included in this issue is our hot young columnist Jill Martin, who wades in with two columns – the IT list and OUT AND ABOUT and on the cover Chris Whittle of the Edison Project, his wife Priscilla Ratazzi and their magnificent Golden Retriever, photographed on the lawn of their home overlooking Georgica Pond.

EPISODE 5: The Limousine Ride

by Dan Rattiner

At two o'clock Friday afternoon, Fairfield Sampson was in the dining room of the triplex penthouse co-op he owned on Sutton Place, drinking coffee and looking out the bay window to the street four flights below. He was home from work early. Everyone was packed. Right on schedule, the big white limousine pulled up.

The voice of the doorman came over the intercom.

"Vladimir is here," it said.

About six minutes later, Fairfield, his wife Alison, daughter Jennifer, and son Willy – holding the dog – were under the awning out front of the apartment building waiting for Vladimir to get out of the driver's seat and open the doors for them. They were laden down with luggage.

But it was not Vladimir. Getting out from behind the wheel was a short bald man with lambchop sideburns.

"Where is Vladimir?" Fairfield asked.

"Vladimir sick. Very sick. I come. But he be better tomorrow."

"Who are you?"

"I am his brother Boris."

The ride out to the Hamptons proceeded uneventfully. They sat inside the limo, and, as they always did, played backgammon from the little kit Vladimir kept for them. The shades were down. They had long ago found that with the shades down the dog did not throw up.

Only an hour into the trip, however, the limo stopped. Boris came over the intercom.

"I not sure of turn off," Boris said.
"Vladimir tell me, but it look funny. You heln?"

Fairfield had a real good move to make on the board.

"Pull into a gas station, Boris," Fairfield said. "Ask them."

The limo started, five minutes later stopped, then five minutes after that started again. And once more they were on their way.

The trip always took between two and two and a half hours. And sure enough, just two hours and ten minutes later, the door opened and the four of them, plus the dog, piled out. They were not in the Hamptons. In front of them was a big building with the sign BASEBALL HALL OF FAME on the front. Alongside the main entrance, a small brass band was playing Take Me Out to the Ball Game.

"I took Exit 86," Boris said.

"Everybody pile back in," Fairfield said.

"Dad, we're in COOPERSTOWN!" 14 year old Willie said, jumping up and down. And he ran into the building.

It took fifteen minutes for Fairfield and Boris to round up Willie, who by this time was laden down with mitts, baseball bats and baseball hats.

"Look dad, a baseball signed by the 1919 Black Sox!"

"It's a fake, Willie."

"No, it's REAL," Willie said. A man came over. Fairfield paid him two thousand six hundred dollars.

"Have a nice day," the man said.

All the way back to the limo, Fairfield

"I fix. I fix," Boris said. He gestured with his hands.

Willy

"He's doing the best he can, dad," Willie said, tossing the ball in the air and catching it with his mitt.

They piled back into the limo.

"Don't leave the car again," Alison said to Willie. "And don't throw that ball around." And to Fairfield: "You better change the Nick & Toni's reservation.

We're going to be late."

Boris moved off. Fairfield took out the cell phone. He'd have to pull every string and every favor at his command.

Two hours later, the door opened again. They were under a porte au chere. Opening the door was a handsome valet dressed in a rough approximation of the uniform of the Canadian Mounted Police. Below them was the most magnificent lake they had ever seen, surrounded by snowcapped mountains.

"It's Lake Louise!" Jennifer squealed.
She ran out of the car. "I'm going skiing."
"Welcome to Banff," the valet said.

It took Fairfield, screaming at Boris, nearly half an hour to round up Jennifer just as she was getting on a ski lift at Mount Norquay. Fairfield paid the handsome instructor two hundred dollars. There was also a bill of six thousand four hundred dollars for the boots, helmet, goggles and skis.

"Back in the car!" Fairfield shouted.

"Oh dad, you are a spoilsport," Jennifer

"I should have turned at Exit 16," Boris said. "I get you there."

Back in the limo, they slept. The Nick & Toni's reservation was blown. They didn't know where they would eat.

Two hours later, the door opened and the dog ran off. They were in Lynchburg, Tennessee and it was the weekend of the Annual Poodle Festival.

Two hours after that, the door opened and they were in Paris and Alison had run off to the fall fashion show at the Pompidou. There was a bill from the house of Isaac Mizrachi for seventy two thousand dollars. Fairfield wrote a check.

Fairfield could no longer yell at Boris. He had lost his voice. Only squeaks came out. And now it was dark. Where would Boris take them next?

One hour later, Boris was at the side door to the limo shouting, laughing and talking in a foreign language. He opened the door and now everybody piled out once again.

"Tashkent, Uzbekistan," Boris shouted proudly. "It's an accident. My home town."

"Isn't this where dad's family is from?"
Willie asked Alison.

"Just on his father's side," Alison replied.

"His mother's family came over on the Mayflower, just like mine."

"I thought GranMaMa was from Warsaw," Jennifer said.

"She just went to private school in Warsaw," Alison sniffed.

Now it was Fairfield and Boris's turn to wander off. In the darkness, they went down a hill, past some huts with smoke coming out of their chimneys, and they were gone.

"Must-haves"

By Jill Martin

Well, to survive in the Hamptons...you must know what's "in." Here's a list of "must-haves" that a true Hamptonite cannot live without.

This week I hit
East Hampton
(with pleasure).

If you're out for a round of golf, don't let your bag be your handicap. Burberry has thought of everything; a golf bag, windbreaker, and matching umbrella. If you are going to get caught in the rain, you might as well get caught in style! A birdie tells me that you can get them at The Nines, Newton Lane. Bag ($375), windbreaker ($128), umbrella ($115)

Well if you are going to strut around town all decked, you can't neglect your pooch. Every yuppie puppy needs the right accessories. OK, maybe the Burberry windbreaker is too much, but a Hamptonite's canine needs the perfect choker! Christopher Fischer Cashmere Collections, Main Street. (assorted styles $125-$185, doggie basket $850)

This summer, touches of diamonds, big faces for women, and changeable bands are still de rigueur...so change it up! The Katherine Tess watch collection is not only sporty, it is tres chic. (and I love the case it comes in!) Don't let time pass you by. Katherine Tess Watches at Georgina, Main Street. Sport Watch $400, with diamonds, $2300. Don't waste a second...

Well, let's not forget our little Hamptonettes. Matching Outfits, shoes, and bags are must for those playdates. These necessities may set you back a bit but you don't want to be outdone at the upcoming Polo Match....do you? After brunch at Babette's swing into Rumrunner Kid, Main Street. Ladybug dress $118.

Who's in the Hood

by C.J. Squires

There goes the neighborhood...or at least there goes a bit of history. The beach house of Lee Radziwill, sister of the late Jackie Onassis, has been sold to leveraged-buyout king Thomas Lee from Boston. The estate, built in the 1930's by the Maidstone Club comes with a pool and tennis court, fairly standard items for a house on the ocean. This was the same house Jerry Seinfeld tried to buy a couple of years ago. The house was sold for more than $16 million. Jerry did buy Billy Joel's house and it cost twice that. We think the history of the Radziwill house alone is priceless. Someone who has written it all down is Alastair Gordon. His new book takes a look at the history of architecture on the famous South Fork. It is facsinating as he presents the generations of trends and how they somehow all fit together. Ahh, we don't think so and anyone out here can tell you money doesn't necessarily buy the best. Ira Rennert's sprawling Sagaponack "villa" is a prime example. By the way is it done yet? Talking of priceless...that was the look of Jon Stewart in the Paradise Café as his wife, Trudy was browsing in the book section looking at baby books. There was a lot of joking around as Jon pulled his baseball cap lower over his face as he was caught by prying eyes. Steven Spielberg doesn't know it but Joan Rivers is set to be the hot wax girl for him. When asked what she would do if the Screen Actors Guild decides to strike this summer, she said she's heading out here for a job washing his cars for a job. We think that if she realized Tom Cruise may be with Steven (they are wrapping up a movie project) out here this summer (he was seen purchasing a mighty fine motorcycle in Southampton), she would come out regardless of the pending strike. But then again, maybe not. The closest Ivana Trump will be to cars this summer will be from viewing them from the Mediterranean Sea with binoculars. No, she won't be at the parties out here. This will be the first year in a while she hasn't made the scene. If Paul MaCartney is heading out to his little cottage in Amagansett this summer, we wonder if he wouldn't just surprise his buddy Paul Simon and join him on stage at the Back To The Sea Concert at Southampton College this August. They just did a duo act in L.A. for a charity of Paul's. Hey, Paul this is a charity event, too. We now know why Liv Tyler has been showing up here and there about the Hamptons...she just purchased a town house in the Village...the other village...the one in the city. Someone who has made us all feel wonderful about our bodies by giving us beautiful, flattering clothing under her label and for a quick local fix has a store here in East Hampton is in our thoughts. Donna Karan's husband, Stephen Weiss, has died. Ever present in the Hamptons but in an unconspicuise way, the family was a great addition to our neighboorhood. We wish Donna peace of mind.

DONNA KAREN

CLAIMS TO FAME: They're the darlings of the young Hollywood set dressing the bods of Winona Ryder, Jennifer Lopez, Ashley Judd, Cameron Diaz, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Elizabeth Hurley, Jennifer Love Hewitt and Tori Spelling. AT THE OSCARS: Although we just found that Halle Berry looks great without clothes (in the film, Swordfish) she also looked great in them as well wearing Badgley Mischka to the Oscars.

DEFINING STYLE: "Our style harks back to the glamorous Hollywood of the Forties"

STYLE UNZIPPED: "One zip and you're dressed. We like to keep things simple, It's fabulous if you can spend hours getting ready, but a woman should also be able to bring a dress to work and change there for an evening out."

The dog tried to follow, but Willie grabbed him. And Alison instructed that they all wait inside the limo. They waited four hours. Dawn was breaking.

Now the two men returned, smiles on their faces. And there was a third man, wearing what looked like a blanket.

"He come with us. I not see Uri long, long time. He friend."

"Everyone here makes these incredible pewter candlesticks," Fairfield, whose voice was still gone, croaked. "By hand. They can do eight thousand a month. Fifty eight cents apiece. It's incredible. We're shipping their entire twelve thousand stick inventory by Fed Ex tomorrow."

Uri smelled of camphor and leather. He got in the front with

"And I met my relatives," Fairfield croaked. "The name is Samsanovitchstien. One's a Rabbi."

The limo moved off, Uri and Boris laughing and shouting in that foreign language, and suddenly Fairfield felt somebody shaking him. It was Alison in her cotton nightgown, her hand on his shoulder. He was in his bed with the down comforter. And outside he could hear the surf crashing against their beach.

"Wake up, Fairfield," Alison said. "You're having a bad dream."

Fairfield opened his eyes.
Then he closed them again. He could smell the salt sea air, the newly mowed lawn, the coffee brewing downstairs. And there was this funny smell. Camphor. Was Uri in bed too? He rolled over. Nope.

Sacks and clubs and rock and roll. If this is all your brain and body need, then you can scour the country for vacation sites, but you won't do better than a trip to the comeback city of Cleveland, Ohio.

The sacks are frequently jammed with Indians and the seats with Tribe fanatics at Jacobs Field, one of the first wave of throwback stadiums to sweep major league baseball. For the first time in five years sellouts are not the rule, so seats can be had on game day. As for the music segment of your trip, the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame is no mistake by the lake. Coupled with Jacobs Field, this attraction has breathed a fresh blast of vitality into what had been a stagnant city.

But the most pleasant surprise of all is about an hour's drive down the Erie coast west of Cleveland. Here, in the small town of Huron, lies one of the midwest's finest golf resorts, Sawmill Creek. Its 18-hole championship course demands excellence in all facets of the game and provides beautiful glimpses of the region's unheralded natural beauty.

The guest rooms are contemporary and comfortable. But it is the nerve center of the resort, Sawmill Creek's Lodge, that is the real showstopper. In contrast to the hackneyed nautical themes one might expect from lobby. It is no exagerration to say that this is more than a reception area; it is a mini-museum. Artciles like a beaded pouch that can be traced to the brother of the warrior who killed General Custer at Little Bighorn compel much more than a passing glance.

Artwork depicting Native lifestyle roams freely through the lobby. "Tecumseh Falls," a two-story high stone wall with a waterfall, represents the Ohio natural wonder of the same name.

But you're here for golf and you'll be glad you are. Designed by Tom Fazio, Sawmill Creek's layout presents several imaginative holes that will linger in your memory long after the round is over.

The course starts off with a couple of well-carpentered, if unspectacular par 4s, which are designed to move play along quickly. The first of several great par 5s is the dogleg left third, whose fairway narrows imperceptibly, but dangerously, all the way to a green which allows peeks at Lake Erie through a smattering of multi-gabled condos.

The Elite 18 (Semi-Private and Public Course Golf holes)

From the wooded, pristine courses of the Pine Barrens to the magnificent links layouts of the Twin Forks, golfers on the East End are blessed with a stunning variety of courses to match wits against.

With 15 full length courses and a sprinkling of quality par three layouts, the East End has golfers saying Myrtle Who?

To celebrate the area's emergence as a golfers paradise,

Dan's Papers introduces a contest to determine the elite 18 holes of the East End.

Send in your choices for your favorite holes by filling in the ballot below.

(Comments explaining your choices are welcome)

The results will be published one hole at a time until Sept. 28

CLASSICS?

The word "classic," when used to describe cars, is perhaps one of the most misused words in the English language. Let me make one thing perfectly clear; because a car is old, doesn't mean it's a classic car. To me, and to most people in the know, a car is a classic if it had some charisma the day it left the factory. Case in point, a 1955 Buick Special four door sedan was just a family hack and quite a boring car, then and now. However, a '55 Buick Century convertible was a true hot-rod of the era, as fast as a '55 Chevy (probably the fastest American car built in 1955). The Buick was quite attractive if you like gold chains and chrome. Certainly a '55 Chevy Bel Air sedan is weak in resale value when compared to a Bel Air convertible. The same can be said for a Jaguar Mk 7 sedan verses a sleek XK-120 Jaguar roadster all or the same period.

As practical as they are, from a collector car point of view, four-door sedans stink. Convertibles have always been the most coveted of classic models, with the sole unique excepton of the 1955-57 Mercedes Benz Gullwing coupe Because the coupe had those amazing (for the period) lift up doors, it has always been more valuable than its sibling, the 300SL convertible. Don't get me wrong, both of these cars define the word classic, and they are both highly desirable because they happen to be engineering triumphs.

There is another word that keeps popping up in collector car jargon, and that word is "rare." Don't be fooled by this, because sometimes a car is rare because nobody wanted it when it was new, so few collectors want it now. Sure, an Italian Siata is a rare and beautiful car, but no one purchased them. Edsel, Humber, Jowett Amphibicar and Nash to name a few. Sure these cars are rare, but who cares. God forbid you try to restore one. Where do you get parts for these vehicles, windshields, brake cylinders.etc? Rare is not always good. unless the vehicle is exceedingly valuable and highly desirable. I can kick myself for the following moment of madness. In 1970 I was offered a 1964 Ferrari GTO for $7,500. The car was tatty, and I remember it had a cracked windshield. At that time, I knew it was virtually impossible to find a new windshield for the car, so I refused the offer, Today a Ferrari GTO is worth (Continued on next page)

Las Vegas Is For Kids, Too!

Las Vegas is not just lights, casinos, hotels, dining and nightlife. There is lots to do for the kids, too. Here are a couple of ideas for you.

Feeling parched? This immersion into an undersea world should do the trick. One of the city's newest aquatic attractions, Shark Reef contains 75 species of sharks, tropical and freshwater fish, reptiles, marine invertebrates and rays. The largest is a 12-foot long nurse shark. Ultimately, Shark Reef hopes to have nearly 100 different species swimming over, under, around and through the exhibit.

The Highlights

The attraction offers a petting area, along with a tunnel directly through the aquarium to give you that deep sea feeling. Watch out for the cool, golden crocodile that likes to stare people down. There's even a section that allows for "walking on water," complete with a display underneath that features a fake treasure chest and plastic (we hope) skeleton.

Secret Garden of Siegfried & Roy

It's lions and tigers and magicians, oh my! It's also one of the best attractions on the Strip. 3400 Las Vegas Blvd S, Located at The Mirage Las Vegas Las Vegas, NV 89109-8923

The Fauna

The tour begins with the above ground part of the dolphin habitat, in which the guides assure visitors that none of the dolphins were captured from the wild. One was born at the location (there's a video display of the birth) and the rest came from other marine wildlife parks. The tanks are large and about as pleasant as any large tanks could be. Visitors are led through the aboveground area and then below, for a dolphin's-eye view of the mammals.

The Flora

The "garden" area is no less impressive. An elephant is a regular part of the attractions, and the cats rotate in and out of the nice, grassy space. The big predators look as comfortable as any domestic cat. Listening wands that allow visitors to hear Siegfried and or Roy explain the importance of each animal are a nice (or scary) bonus.

Admission is $10 and children under 10 are free.

Adventuredome

This enclosed theme park at Circus Circus keeps kids occupied and parents cool. 2880 Las Vegas Boulevard S., Located at the Circus Circus Hotel & Casino Las Vegas, NV 89109, (800) 444-2472

The Dome

Back when Las Vegas luminaries believed building a theme park was the best way to attract vacationing families, the fear was that no one would want to shuffle around in long lines during the city's 110-degree summers. It's this recognition that led to the Adventuredome—a fully enclosed, five-acre park under a pink-tinted plastic dome. Huge ventilation ducts spit cold air into the dome and keep it in the upper 70s even on the hottest days.

The Attractions

Less of a theme park and more of a permanent carnival, the rides are entertaining but not overwhelming. Even the centerpiece double-loop, double-corkscrew roller coaster is so smooth and short it hardly feels like a thrill ride. Laser tag, a motion simulator, plenty of rides for the littlest ones, and quite a few carnival-style game booths and arcades are also here to satisfy the kids for an afternoon. Price: $11.95-$15.95 will give pause to pulling out your driver. A sharp dogleg left leading to a redan green will challenge approach shots. Proximity to the pin is crucial here, so better to rely on wedges than long irons.

Park your cart on a small bridge overlooking an inlet marina and march to the back tees on the par 3 fifth hole. A creek runs down the entire right side of the hole, requiring that your drive hold its line all the way to the green. There's a bail out area left, but the chip to the elevated and crowned green is quite delicate.

The other par 3 on the front nine puts the awe in awesome. It is 188 yards from the upper deck tees to an even more elevated green and en route your drive must travel over a pond, a 20-foot embankment and another couple of feet of bulkheading. What's more this all-or-nothing tee shot plays into prevailing westerly winds. Driver, certainly, and it needs to be hit on the screws.

The back nine starts out similar to the front with straight, tree-lined par fours that are somewhat permissive of erratic shots. But there's a lot to be concerned about on the par 5 twelfth. 568 yards from the tips, this beautiful hole plays along a nature preserve to the left and a stone-banked lily pond presided over by weeping willows to the right. The green is a picture of serenity, with a log-strewn pond lying just beyond its back edges.

The thirteenth is yet another magnificent par 3, which is all carry to the green, 171 yards away. If you plunk one in the drink, however, you'll still be rewarded, particularly if you're a nature lover and might enjoy spying a turtle colony mucking around the banks. Perhaps taking after the pond's denizens, the extremely narrow green occupies the shape of a about three million dollars.

Which brings me to the subject of race cars as classics. One would think that they have everything going for them, rarity, sexy looks, high performance and social status image. This is all true, but the one problem with race cars is that most of them have to be driven on race tracks. They are also usually very delicate machines. To quote the late Colin Chapman, the engineering genius who created Lotus Cars of England, "the perfect race car should win the race and then fall apart as it passes the finish line." What he meant is that serious race cars are built as lightly as possible, for higher power to weight ratios. Sadly, many Lotus race cars fell apart before they finished their races, injuring their drivers.

There is a strong selective following for race cars of all types as well as for high performance American muscle cars, like the Ford Shelby GT-350s, and the hot rod Pontiac GTOs, Chevy 409s and Chrysler superbirds.

When it comes to race car collecting, the most valuable are the cars that have been the most successful racers. Without a doubt, these are the Ferrari and Porsche. The simple reason these two marques are so desirable today is because they have a strong racing pedigree. Of course if you are lucky enough to own a factory modified MG, Austin Healy, Aston Martin or AC Cobra that has raced at a major race like Le Mans, the car is valuable indeed...and a real classic. If it is a proven race winner, like "first in its class at Sebring in '61 and can be documented, the car is even more valuable. The two key words to remember here are "factory modified" and "documented."

Another thing that makes a classic is what I call the cute factor. The Austin Mini was produced by the millions, and yet it's a classic because it's a landmark design, and its cheeky diminutive small dimensions. The same can be said of the even smaller 1957 Fiat 500 or the Misserschmidt bubble car, the BMW Isetta 300 and the charming Citroen 2CV.

There is definitely a weird factor. The 1961 Citroen ID 19, with its angry clam looks leads the pack, even though it's a magnificent piece of engineering. The Cord 810 was shockingly beautiful, but by any design standard, strange. The magnificent, beautiful and weird Alfa-Romeo Bertone Bat shaped series. The '59 Cadillac. And the beat goes on even today.

Future classics. Here today. If you're hot for them now, you'll still lust after them in 30 years.

turtle shell, brushing shots off the putting surface that are not hit dead center,

The claustrophobic tee box on the par 4 14th is merely ten yards in width between trees and the chute barely widens until you're 140 yards out in the fairway. As with most of the fairways this one is bounded by loosely scattered red maples and red pines. Though not thickly wooded, you'll be playing from your hands and knees if you happen to nestle by the trunks of one of the pines.

Another unnervingly narrow tee-shot comes from the sixteenth. Framed by ponds left and right and a swamp behind, you'll want a camera and a portable tape recorder to capture the symphony of chirps from the redwing blackbirds and finches darting about the scenic wetlands.

This very pretty course does have a couple of slight demerits. There is no driving range, only a warm-up net by the first tee. And there's precious little to see of Lake Erie, in spite of the layout meandering along

As a whole the course is quite remindful of our Montauk Downs: It plays alongside a large body of water which is palpable, but not manifest. The holes are highly distinctive and the terrain effortlessly includes creeks, ponds and elevation changes. The off-shore breezes, as at Montauk, can play havoc, particularly in the afternoon and Fazio's routing is alert to nature's caprices.

Of course, a stay at a top resort demands a top restaurant and Sawmill Creek delivers. The main dining room is called Salmon Run and features terrific filet mignon and excellent regional fresh fish like perch and wall-eyed pike. The entertainment is a real throwback with lounge bands performing top 40 circa 1978. You'd be excused for half-expecting Bill Murray to pop out crooning "Star Wars, nothing but Star Wars ...

But isn't a trip out of town about not just traveling to a different place, but a different time as well?

There is so much to watch when you are sailing and even when you're not. There's the sky, which has been filled with rain clouds, and the wind, which has been

wet. There's the Weather Channel, weather.com and even the National and Oceanic Atmospheric Administration's website, http:/ weather.noaa.gov. Did you know that NOAA declared this Lightning Safety Awareness Week? Gee, what a shock! It certainly wasn't Beautiful Weather for Sailing Week.

In the United States alone, lightning annually kills an average of 73 people and many more are struck and suffer a wide range of debilitating symptoms. I must have been hit because I have every one. Memory loss. I've forgotten what it's like to be on my boat. Attention Deficit Disorder. Every huge puddle I drive through has me looking for my depth finder.

Sleep disorders. I go to sleep watching the 11 o'clock weather report and wake up to the Weather Channel. Stiffness in joints. I swear I'm rusting. Inability to sit for long periods of time. Every day, I'm off and running to different marine stores, buying another thing I need for the boat. Depression. Both my mind and my economic health are in bad shape.

Life has been slow this week, still tied up to a mooring in Mount Sinai Harbor. I always knew that if you wanted to get from here to there quickly, you did not go by this week. Rain, shine or with paddles, my crew and I are going eastward.

I visited Mattituck this weekend by jeep, not boat, and Deborah and I were pleased to finally meet Sara, the owner of the Matt-A-Mar Marina. Her son Cyrus was minding the store while she was ferrying visiting boaters to-and-from the Strawberry Festival. "We were supposed to be filled, but there were lots of cancellations due to the weather," he said. Matt-A-Mar is a very laid-back boating resort, complete with landscaped grounds, a beautiful pool and a fine Italian restaurant, A Touch of Venice.

There are over 100 slips and 20 to 30 set aside for transients. "We get boaters mostly from Connecticut and up-island. Some come over just for lunch. One guy in a 60 foot Viking comes out 10 to 12 times a season just for lunch. It's a 2 million dollar boat, a floating palace," said Cyrus. Besides being a perfect place to spend a few days, Matt-A-Mar features kayak rentals. "We rent for 2 hours or the whole day; Hobies, Lincolns, Cobras, Winnona and other brand names. There's all sorts of wildlife," said Cyrus, describing the sights between the marina and the inlet, about a mile and a half north.

"There are snowy white egrets, great blue herons, ospreys and kingfishers." The sights we favored most were the huge pina coladas served to us by Ettore Pennacchia, the chef at A Touch of Venice. But those were not his specialty.

"My sauce is great. Any dish with that is fabulous. My lobster is very good. We boil it and remove the meat and sauté it with fresh garlic, asparagus, virgin olive oil, butter, a few other ingredients and serve it over angel hair pasta." Another big seller is his stuffed artichokes. Sometime during our week's stay there we hope to sample his fine cooking, as well as other restaurants in the Mattituck area

New adventures await the crew of the Orange Crush, as soon as we make our way east. Friday night will

DANGOS IN THE LONGHOUSE GARDENS

Some things bear repeating, even if they are obvious to people-in-the-know: the Longhouse Reserve is one of the best kept secrets in the Hamptons.

Public sculptures amidst lush gardens are popular and not at all secret in places like Paris where the Tuileries are now filled with permanent works by contemporary artists like Dubuffet, Henry Moore and Roy Lichtenstein.

Luckily, we don't have to travel to France to see significant sculpture. It's right here in our own backyard, the current exhibit at the Longhouse being a prime example. Jun Kaneko's dangos (or "dumplings" in Japanese) are described as "large, gaily painted and patterned ceramic sculpture."

What makes these pieces so important is, first, their nearly oval shape, a form that has universal meaning (the egg is oval). The fact that they are obviously "misshappen" gives that meaning a humorous demeanor. They communicate a playfulness that defies national

Most significantly, however, is the way the dangos

Dangos in the LongHouse Gardens

are placed in the garden. Such arrangement is both philosophical as well as aesthetic, melding the art works to the natural setting. Of course, any public sculpture placed in a garden may serve similar purposes, but the Longhouse's endeavors are particularly outstanding

One piece by Mr. Kaneko stands at the end of a reflecting pool, its shape functioning as an arresting counterbalance to the rectangle pool and rounded boxhedges. Yet the work's smooth, reflective texture also connects it to the pool's glistening water. Thus, the differences and similarites make a salient statement about

The same point is made in Mr. Kaneko's two ceramic heads. The pieces are done in black and white, two opposing colors, but similarties are apparent as one face reflects the other.

Three individual dangos greet the LongHouse visitor, their brightly painted lines and often concentric circles attracting us to their maze-like configurations. We are, at once, drawn to the dangos' decorative aspects as well as fascinated by the maze which is created. At first, we forget we are in a garden. Then we feel the breeze, see the trees, hear the birds, and harmony is restored.

The dangos will be on view at the Longhouse Reserve until Sept. 9.

Speaking with Peter Max, even for a brief period, is like circling the planet in a space shuttle. Not only do you literally "see" the world during a compressed period of time, but you also "experience" the terrain from a totally different perspective

Mr. Max delights in taking people on such a "ride," both with his personal encounters and his art. While his trips don't always follow a straight route as he meanders here and there (for example, stopping a conversation to respond to an assistant's question), friends/guests and art consumers alike feel involved, becoming part of what Mr. Max is doing or describing. If he lives "in the moment," he makes sure that other people share that moment, too.

The origin of Mr. Max's penchant for the moment, complete with all its detours, is hard to determine. He even today. I remember sounds, everything. The Chinese are the most amazing people on the planet," he says with characteristic enthusiasm.

Conversely, Mr. Max's total embrace of the instant may somehow concern his parents and their tremendous influence on his life. "My father was an extraordinary businessman who could have been an actor," he notes. "My mother was a fashion designer who encouaged my art, who would put my work up on the wall as soon as I had done something. She always told me she would clean up after me if I had made a mess painting."

Mr. Max takes full advantage of every moment of his day. He may, for instance, draw on bits of paper during a meeting or while eating lunch. "It's a subconscious thing," he admits. "But I'm very conscious of the composition on the page. I may do twenty- five to seventy - five drawings a a day. Of course, I don't just do drawings. I can do an etching or a painting or a ceramic piece."

It's apparent that Mr. Max's moments cover a myriad of experiences and human endeavors. He puts it most succinctly himself when he says, "I like to do a little bit of everything, involving physical, intellectual and conceptual skills. It's like when you make pea soup with croutons. You have soft texture with some crunch, too."

What you also have is a bit of contradiction to go with that pea soup and those special Peter Max moments. While he's an artist who's sometimes perceived as being "commercial" (during November and December, he had over five thousand banners covering twenty different subjects on view in New York), he reveals himself a lot through his art. And although his creative moments may serve as quick fixes as he goes from one experience to another, it's his sincere love of life that makes such moments possible - and memorable.

DARWIN WENT THAT WAY

All men are created equal . . . they are endowed with certain unalienable Rights . . . among these are Life and the liberty to behave like total asses or recently arrived aliens . . . and that goes for women, too. Movie actors, for instance, will blithely resort to the alienation of their affection for dramaturgy by taking bonecrunching pratfalls, a gooey splat of whatever in the face and even, as the black comedian Orlando Jones does in the mutating sci-fi jokey-hokey film, EVOLU-TION, go into the rectum of a huge, menacing Blob causing it to evacuate tons of foul but, custardy-looking waste . . . before, that is, the monstrous thing explodes and showers the goop over miles of Arizona desert and it's governor Dan Aykroyd. This may trigger your remembrance of the giant Pillsbury dough boy bent on destroying New York City in Ivan Reitman's Ghostbusters, the terrific hit that teamed Mr. Avkroyd with Bill Murray and Harold Ramis 17 years ago.

Reitman revisits his Ghostbusters format with a new team: David Duchovny, Julianne Moore, and the above colonoscopy specialist, Orlando Jones. In Evolution. the team is out to bust a rapidly evolving and multiplying vast array of alien organisms, worms, indescribable swimming, flying and crawling things and finally razortoothed ape men and, of course, the all-enveloping blubbery pooping mass from outer space.

EVOLUTION

ANALYZE WHAT ?

Aliens are not alien to Duchovny who has been trying everything to get out of the dark, spooky X-Files of TV fame. Ms. Moore, too, has had her share of weird beings having coped with Hannibal Lechter recently. In this movie she makes her entrance doing a headover-heels splat fall revealing a voluptuous thigh and garter belted stockings to kick-off sexual disalienation. At least, Hannibal respected her. In these comedies the widdle boy, tittering sex jokes are, for women, as constant and as annoying as monthly cramps. If one is to point out the political incorrectness in this area of comic movies where pelting of dignity is a given, then one must admit surrender, for this era of cultural pop cool has created a truce in racial and sexual antigonisms, so that Mr. Jones can suffer all kinds of indignities in a sort of reverse joke on a joke on a joke. It's far removed, so it's ok. Ms. Moore is a fine actress, so she can keep bumping into things and tripping and flashing flesh. It's all for a laugh and there actually are quite a few in EVOLUTION. Maybe more bemused smiles than raucous, roaring Hah-hahs. SPOOF AND GOOF

Many of the scenes are stolen by visual effects expert Phil Tippett's incredible cast of creatures that evolve from the slimy ooze of a meteor that crashes into the desert disrupting the antics of a wanna-be fireman (one of the token doofus dudes that populates SNL type movies). The goop that "bleeds" from the alien rock has more intelligence than all these thick heads. Except, for Duchovny, a fallen military scientist now teaching in a community college as is his pal and side-kick, Jones. Together they gather up and analyze the goop galloping up the evolutionary scale . . . first as micro-organisms, then! STEP BACK. Before you can say "Eureka" or, just, "EEK!" The military (Duchovny's old competitors) have set up shop and doing all the dumb things the Pentagon does. Ms. Moore is their scientist consultant and does those falls ungracefully. She will also supply the love interest and the dandy booty. I won't name the three screenwriters, to protect the guilty.

IN THE COURSE OF HUMAN EVENTS

Where does the movie go from there? Let's put it this way. . . it doesn't evolve. It's as primordial as the ooze. There are some signs of life in it but, is there intelligent life out there? It's too bad the aliens were stopped at the ape/man stage . . . the movie ends before the real absurdity.

Dead or Alive (+)

Dead or Alive is Reservoir Dogs to the 10th power. The scenes of mayhem, blood, guts and brutality are endless. Audiences are standing in line at Cinema Village to see this flick.

The story - and it's not always rational or comprehensible - is of the cops and organized crime in Japan. The major crime is the sale of drugs, as it would be

The Japanese are the cops and also those who run the drug syndicate, but the criminals also include Chinese from the mainland and Taiwan. The cops are led by a chief who simply sits on the roof of the police building carving flutes and uttering Haiku-like sayings to his officers. The leading officer is Jojima (Show Aikawa) whose daughter needs a very expensive life saving operation. The question throughout the film is whether or not he will take a bribe to pay for the costly

There is prostitution, regular sex (if oral sex counts as sex in Japan - we know it doesn't in Arkansas) and bestiality involving a woman and a dog. The finale, more revenge than police work, is almost more than one can boar. With car bombings, amputations and weapons of mass destruction, it's a special experience. When this film is over you'll immediately forget it, unlike Reservoir Dogs which you will remember forever.

While the names of the characters were unknown to me, everyone did a workman-like job. The director, Takashi Milke, is singled out and hailed in all of the

The central figure in the flick is Felix (Sami Bouajila), an Arab living in Normandy, trance. He is gay and lives with his lover, a teacher, Daniel (Pierre-Loup Rajot). Felix's character and personality are quickly established. He is a loving and loveable person with a comfortable lifestyle, though be has lost his job because the feny boats on which he works are being replaced by hovercralls.

One day, after Felix's mother dies, he decides to visit the father he has never met in Marseilles. He tells his lover to meet him there in five days.

the south, and has a number of adventures all of which, while unusual, are totally believable. They include an encounter with an adolescent, Jules, (Charly Sergue) who picks him up to have sex with him. Felix is taking a prescription cocktail for his HIV or AIDS (we are not told which). At the clinic he goes to, we are privy to a discussion amongst two patients and Felix. We learn that there are five drug cocktails, depending on your stage of illness, and Felix is at number three.

Felix's best adventures are with Isabelle (Ariane Ascaride) whom he meets when she has a flat tire. There are three children in her car who range in age from about 10 to 16 who are all an their way to their three different fathers for the weekend. The relationship between Isabelle and Felix is tender but not sexual.

His relationship with an old woman, Mathilde, (Patachou) who gives him a ride is especially interesting. She is wise, nonjudgmental, and tries unsuccessfully to get Felix to remain with her.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Amidst all the summer discourse on grilling and barbecuing, for many of us there is still dinner to get out most nights. And it isn't always a party. While the pasta craze of the 80s may no longer be with us, cooking pasta is still a very practical idea for a simple supper. Especially when pasta is the "meal."

Serving pasta as a main course is not the traditional Italian way. In Italy, pasta is always served as a first course to take the edge off the appetite. This is followed by a main course of fish, poultry or beef, usually in small quantities. A vegetable or salad can be a course inbetween. Fruit generally completes the meal unless it is a special occasion. This makes good sense, but Americans have learned to love pasta and to make a meal of it — my family included.

Pasta aglio e olio is a basic pasta made with garlic and olive oil to which I added blanched escarole leaves and snippets of dried hot pepper for a variation on a theme. Pasta with asparagus, lemon and Parmesan is a light yet completely satisfying dish. And linguine with fava beans, scallions and pancetta has the right combination of taste, texture and nourishment.

Here are three pasta recipes that can "make the meal."

LINGUINE WITH FAVA BEANS, SCALLIONS AND PANCETTA

Tender nuggets of crisped pancetta mingle with fresh fava beans and scallions in a light broth for a hearty pasta supper.

Serves 4-6

1 pound fresh fava beans in their pods

1/4 pound pancetta or prosciutto in one piece

3 tablespoons olive oil

1 bunch scallions, white and green part, thinly sliced

3/4 - cup low-sodium chicken broth

Salt and pepper to taste, as needed

1 pound linguine

Coarse (kosher) salt to cook the pasta

1. Shell the beans then blanche them in salted water to taste, for 1 1/2 - 3 minutes, depending on the size of the beans. Drain and refresh under cool running water to stop the cooking. Squeeze one end of the skin with your fingertips (you may need to help split the skin with a paring knife) to pop out the dark green beans. Discard the light green skins.

2. Cut the pancetta or prosciutto into thin slices, then cut the slices into small dice less than 1/2 inch thick. Place the oil and the pancetta in a non-stick skillet and saute over very low heat about 12 minutes. Add the scallions and fava beans and cook several minutes longer until the pancetta is crisp. Add the broth and simmer gently until the vegetables are tender. Season to taste with salt and pepper as needed and keep warm.

3. Meanwhile bring a large pot of cold water to the boil. Add coarse salt to taste, then put in the pasta and cook at a rolling boil for 8-10 minutes depending on the brand or until al dente. Drain the pasta and return it to the pot it cooked in. Pour over the vegetables with the broth and toss vigorously to mix. Serve at once on warm plates.

PASTA WITH ASPARAGUS, LEMON AND PARMESAN

1/2 pound asparagus

Coarse kosher salt for the pasta water

3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1 tablespoon unsalted butter

2 shallots, finely chopped

2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped

2 tablespoons dry white wine

1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

1/2 pound linguine or spaghetti

Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

- 1. Break asparagus spears where they naturally bend. Trim the points along the spears, as they could harbor sand, leaving the tender tips at the top. Soak in cold water for 10-15 minutes. Drain and pat dry.
- 2. Bring a large pot of water to a boil and put in a tablespoon of kosher salt. Then put in the pasta and cook for 8-10 minutes until ad dente or toothsome to the bite.
- 3. Meanwhile, heat olive oil and butter in a large heavy skillet and put in the shallots, sauté about 30 seconds, stirring with a wooden spoon, then add the garlic. Sauté for 30 seconds longer and put in the asparagus. Toss the asparagus with the ingredients in the pan to coat and cook for about 2 minutes. Add white wine and bring to a boil. Cover pan and let cook 2-3 minutes until asparagus is slightly tender. Uncover pan and stir in the lemon juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Keep warm over simmering heat of necessary.

4. Drain pasta in a colander and transfer it to the skillet with the asparagus, add Parmesan cheese and toss vigorously to mix. Serve at once on warm plates.

PASTA AGLIO E OLIO WITH ESCAROLE

Greens, garlic and snippets of hot pepper come together to embellish this classic pasta. Serves: 4-6

1 large head escarole, blanched and drained

3 large cloves garlic, peeled

2 tablespoons coarse salt for cooking the pasta

1 pound spaghetti

3/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil

1/2 teaspoon snipped hot pepper

Coarse kosher salt and freshly ground black pepper

- 1. Core and rinse escarole and remove any bruised outer leaves. Soak the leaves in bowl of fresh water for 20 minutes. Bring a large pot of water to the boil and salt the water. Drain the escarole and put into the boiling water. Cook with cover ajar for 6-8 minutes. Drain again and cool under cold running water then squeeze very dry in a clean kitchen towel. Coarsely chop the vegetable and slice garlic into slivers. Can be done ahead.
- 2. Bring a large pot of water to a boil. Add coarse salt, then add the pasta and cook at a rolling boil about 8-10 minutes depending on the brand or until al dente.
- 3. Meanwhile, place a small saucepan with the oil over low heat: when the oil is warm, add the slivered garlic and saute for 2 minutes. Add the snipped pepper flakes, salt and pepper and stir to mix. Put in the cooked escarole and toss to mix over heat until everything is warm and garlic is golden, about 2 minutes longer.
- 4. When the pasta is ready, drain in a colander shaking off excess water. Transfer to a very large warm serving platter; pour the garlic/oil sauce over and toss very well.

Note: Aglio E Olio is never eaten with cheese.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Don't be fooled by the 1950s façade of the restored diner at 123 Montauk Highway in Westhampton Beach, which is entering its sixth season. Move over "beautiful people" and check out the newest face-lift in the Hamptons – the Crazy Dog Café restaurant.

Once inside the newly expanded and redecorated dining spot, you will be consumed by flawlessness. Turn to the left, it is more formal, to the right, it is more casual; either way, it is relaxing. It is quite obvious that the owners, the Rifkin and November families, put tremendous thought into everything that goes on within, and their passion bounces off the walls.

The renovation features an exquisitely, striking walnut bar with cherrywood inlay, handmade mosaic flooring, and deep raspberry colors that put you in the Epicurean state of mind.

But, if it is comfort that you are also seeking, you can be assured, among the formality of the limestone fireplace and rich wood floors, you will be pleasantly cozy, and content to your heart's delight.

And it is not by accident that the waiters and waitresses compliment the whole package. "I keep educating the staff," 32-year-old Executive Chef, Eric Rifkin," proudly informed us.

When asked if he recommends a particular dish, he answered, "There's not a DOG on the menu." With this pun, I had to inquire about what provoked the two families to name the restaurant Crazy Dog. With his response, I took note of the well-known photographer, Helen Wintmeyer's black and white photos aligning the deep red walls – a boxer here, a Dalmatian there – and he answered straightforward: "We're two families that are crazy about dogs," he smiled.

At one end of the room, there are two grand, mahogany-mirrored doors that open to a private seating area for sixty; total seating is now 120.

What else is new? A state-of-the-art Le Ver Du Vin wine-by-the-glass system is also available, encouraging customers to take part in Crazy Dog's Wine Spectator award winning wine selection.

As far as changes the chef has seen in tastes for the cuisine over the past five years, he answered, "the new change at Crazy Dog generates more "upscale" dining."

Chef Rifkin has always had in interest in food. "I grew up in a home with a Mom who let us know that 'good Crazy Dog Restaurant
123 Montauk Highway
Westhampton Beach, 288-1444.

eating is a crucial part of our life.'

"Also, when I was younger, I traveled throughout Europe and picked up bits and pieces, which I twist into my own creations. I would backpack through ten countries and learn the significance of food. In Italy, for instance, dining is an experience, unlike the way many of us may eat in a hurry in the United States, even eating in the car. The way the Europeans eat is a ritual we should follow."

After graduating from Johnson & Wales University, Rifkin worked a couple of years under Larry Forgione, at An American Place in Manhattan, and with other acclaimed chefs such as Wolfgang Puck, Jimmy Schmidt, Paul Prudhomme.

When Eric moved from An American Place, he became the sous chef at Halcyon, the flagship restaurant at the luxury Japanese Hotel Rihga royal in New York. Here, Rifkin worked under chef John Halligan - the three-time old medal winner at the culinary olympics in Frankfurt, Germany.

Thereafter, he became owner and chef at City Crab and Seafood Company on Park Avenue, and then worked with the famed Anne Rosenzweig at her new uptown restaurant called The Lobster Club. As soon as the opportunity presented itself, Rifkin opened his own restaurant in Westhampton Beach, where he enjoys practicing and creating his own works of culinary art. His personal philosophy, "nothing is obscure. I allow the flavors to speak for themselves." And they do:

For starters: we chose the Lobster Egg Roll With Duck Sauce ($12), the Hudson Valley Foie Gras Mango Lime Vinaigrette & Watercress Salad ($12), the Orange Ginger Sesame Calamari, lightly fried and coated in a "unique" flavor ($9). Mmmm — This is "delicately" candied and a delightful surprise!

And my favorite appetizer was the light and healthy tasting Vegetable Dumplings, steamed in bamboo, with an Asian dipping sauce.

We tried a variety of salads: Heart of Romaine in a Creamy Garlic Dressing, Croutons and Shaved Parmigiano Reggiano ($8); Arugula Salad, prepared with Red Beets, Goat Cheese and Walnuts, and tossed in a sweet Balsamic Vinaigrette ($9), which was perfect, and my favorite.

But, of course, someone has to order the Crazy Dog Chopped Salad, with each forkful of tomatoes, red onions, cucumbers, roasted red peppers and parmesan ($9); you can't go wrong!

For the entrees: We chose Pinenut crusted Monkfish prepared with Grilled Portobello Mushroom and Marinated Pear Tomatoes ($23); and the Wok-Seared Sesame Crusted Tuna (recommend served rare), sautéed with Crunchy Spinach, Sticky Rice and Soy Ginger Sauce ($24), my husband's preference.

My "pick of the litter," (sorry, couldn't resist) is the Maine Lobster Risotto, with Nishiki Rice, Shrimp, Mussels & Calamari ($27). This is an incredible dish that you will remember. With each bite, you feel like it is your first and will savor it; at least until dessert.

Who can pass on dessert? Especially when they are all made on the premises and the pastry chef is Nicole November Rifkin, herself.

Our choices: the Warm Fallen Chocolate Soufflé with Vanilla Ice Cream; the Classical Cremee Brulee Tahitian Vanilla Beans, and you must try her doughnuts! Of course, also offered—some local flavor, Westhampton's own "Holy Moses" cheesecake. Although there is a nice selection of port and cognac and after dinner dessert wines, we had to get up with our tail between our legs.

But, you can never over indulge when the food is this good. As the chef said of his café, "we add dimension to it with a fun flair, but we keep the food very "serious."

The Crazy Dog is open in season 7 days, 9 -3 p.m., daily 5-10 p.m., Sunday through Thursday; Friday and Saturday 5 p.m. to ll p.m.

hmmm . . . with such extensive hours, next time I will try the daylight menu; for breakfast, perhaps the Giant, Malted Waffle with Fresh Fruit or one of their Fluffy Pan-rolled Omelets with Home Fries and Texas Toast. Or maybe I'll stop by for lunch and ask for what Liza Minelli ordered when in town a few days ago — the Lobster Club Sandwich.

Ahhh... it's a dog's life!

For reservations: (631) 288-1444. You'd be "crazy" not to call.

Julia Child At Wolffer Estate In Sagaponack

Julia Child will be the honored guest at the annual Chefs and Champagne Bastille Day Fete, Saturday, July 14, from 5 p.m. to 8 p.m., on the sprawling grounds of Wolffer Estate Vineyard in Sagaponack, Long Island. How fitting for Julia to be the celebrated guest at this annual event. She was a great friend of James Beard, of whom she said, and I quote, "he has done more for cooking in America than any one person in our history."

Each year participating chefs from distinguished restaurants from Long Island, New York City and Philadelphia serve up their delectable culinary specialties. Champagne Taittinger, as always, will be poured at this summer fundraiser. A feature of the day will be a silent auction with a variety of travel, dining and lifestyle packages.

Christian Wolffer and Nina Griscom, a contributing editor of Food & Wine magazine and a member of the Board of Trustees of the Foundation, will serve as cochairmen of the Chefs & Champagne affair.

Proceeds realized from the benefit, according to president Len Pickell, will be used to support the work of the not-for-profit James Beard Foundation. This includes maintaining the historic James Beard House in Greenwich Village, which is a performance space for the nation's chefs. Annual contributions are made for scholarships and grants for study to aspiring culinarians: and to support the extensive library and archives of Beardiana.

For reservations and information, call the James Beard Foundation at (212) 627-2308. Admission to Chefs & Champagne is $150. for Foundation members and $200. for non-members.

Is Your Face Aging Faster Than You Are?

Plastic surgeons and cosmetic dermatologists have been warning for years that since the mid 1980's, a great deal of cosmetic surgery and aesthetic skin treatment and procedure was chosen (by patients) and performed (by their doctors) in a procedural manner that was not unlike menu choices from a 1950's Chinese restaurant: one from Column A, one from Column B. There was - and is - a lot to choose from, yet surgeons are now beginning to realize that the timing and frequency of procedures that, in the past, was almost whimsically haphazard, is a major issue in aesthetic anti-aging surgery.

The first places we show age is generally around the eyes and the mouth, and this can begin in our twenties, particularly if we have not been careful to either avoid sun damage or use sunblock during childhood and teenage years. "We get 80 percent of our lifetime sun damage before we are twenty years old," says Dr. Sklar," and you can literally see it on someone's face. A recent college grad who has never spent time unprotected in the sun will look a decade younger than one who spent every childhood summer at the beach without using sufficient sunscreen.' Our twenties are a time to start repairing the damage of our youth through regular light alpha and beta hydroxy peels, topical antioxidants and alpha hydroxy acids used daily, and constant attention to sunscreen use, winter and summer. It is also a time when a patient is mature enough to have, if requested, some additional aesthetic procedures, including laser hair removal, liposuction, and aesthetic surgery of the nose and breast.

By our thirties, many of us have had some hormonal issues affecting our skin and aging (childbearing is one) and topical treatments might include skin bleaching preparations and Retin-A or Renova to address fine lines and delay wrinkles. Microdermabrasion or the "power peel" is also a wise option for patients in their thirties, as are Botox injections for deep forehead creases and worry lines on the brow. For the almost 90 percent of women who develop small "spider" veins in the legs (and on the face), sclerotherapy, either via injectable solution or via laser, is an excellent option. And, in men, hair loss often becomes prominent in this decade of life and can be slowed through

MUST HAVE SUMMER PRODUCTS

Somehow, Sharon McConnel-Cooke, creator of "Starfish Oils," knew instinctively how to capture the sights. sound and scents of her homeland in the Caribbean. Using her backround in Aromatherapy, she has managed to accomplish this. Experimenting in a variety of oils and all-natural ingredients at home, she was able to develop the perfect formula and scents for her products.

In 1996, with an impressive list of retail and wholesale customers throughout the Caribbean, Starfish Oils moved into a larger operational facility and opened their fragrant factory in Kingston.

An absolute must have for this summer, with all the threats of the West Nile Virus looming around every dune, is the "Starfish Oils No Mosquito Candle and Spray." We all dread the unwelcome affections of mosquitoes coupled with the unpleasant smell of bug repellents...this may be the answer to our prayers. Starfish Oils introduces an all-natural, sweet smelling No Mosquito Candle and Body Spray that repels mosquitoes and a pleasant - to-humans aroma.

The No Mosquito Candle is made with a specially formulated blend of essential oils-lemongrass, citronella, lavender, Siberian fir and eucalyptus- and provides a safe alternative to keep mosquitoes at bay without the harmful effects or odors of most synthetic repellents. It's perfect for oudoor barbecues, camping excursions or any open areas where bugs are a problem. The Candle has a burn time of seventy-five hours.

The No Mosquito Body Spray combines the same special blend of essential oils used in the No Mosquito Candle, but adds the benefits of grapeseed oil for a light mist that repels while moisturizing. The spray is perfect for men, women and children and is ideal for any warm weather outdoor activities.

Starfish Oils No Mosquito Candle has a suggested retail price of $12. The No Mosquito Spray has a suggested retail price of $6. They can be purchased at H. Groom on Main Street in Southampton.

The company also has a Caribbean Gourmet Candle in scents (flavors) of coffee, tea and citrus. Each candle comes elegantly packaged in an 8-ounce, recyclable airtight canister. Burning time: forty hours, priced at $11.50 each.

Aroma Body Oils are also offered as the perfect sense stimulants. Each has its own distinctive scent that will leave you feeling relaxed and refreshed. The blends are: Love: sesame oil with essential oils of ylang-ylang, cinnamon and sweet orange.

Exciting East End Open Addition

A new men's Pro-Am tournament will give an exciting spin to this year's East End Open Tennis Tournament. The addition of the competitive Pro-Am to a day already filled with three flights of mixed doubles tournaments, beauty and wellness pavilions, a Kids' Kourt, as well as lunch, cocktails, dinner and dancing, promises to make the eighth annual tennis event a bigger draw than

Fiduciary Trust International, Pfizer Inc., Bernstein Investment Research and Management, and CIT Group are among the prominent corporate sponsors that have already signed on to support this event that helps fund the crucial work of hospice care. East end Hospice provides in-home care for the terminally ill and their families on the East End of Long Island and also runs Camp Good Grief, a bereavement camp for children coping with the loss of a loved one. Last year's tennis open provided an impressive sixteen percent of the annual charitable contributions to the East End Hospice and 86.9% of every dollar goes directly to patient care.

Tennis players and spectators of all ages can participate in this all-day event, which takes place on Saturday, June 30, (July 1, raindate) at Westhampton Tennis and Sport in Westhampton Beach. Tickets are $175 for spectators, $200 for mixed doubles and $300 for the men's Pro-Am. To sign up call community relations, East End Hospice, 631-288-7080.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

By Carolyn McAllister
On June 6th I had the wonderful opportunity to head off to Albany to meet the staff of New York Farm Bureau and truly understand the dynamics of what we do. I had spoken to a number of our upstate counterparts but have never been able to put a face with the voice. Here was my chance. I know they were as curious to meet me as well. There is nothing quite like an adventure!

We were given a directive to bring something from Long Island that represents our agricultural environment. We chose fresh, juicy strawberries as this is our season and the berries are fabulous. All the counties of New York State were similarly represented with products from their areas. We were to raffle off what we brought at the end of our day. I didn't understand the purpose behind the raffle idea but what did I know!

We all met at the Albany offices at 8:00 am where we were paired up with a staff member and handed folders with a pretty intimidating questionnaire and information on our agenda for the day. We were going on a farm tour of Washington County, which is in the Hudson Valley. This is cow country. It is beautiful, green, hilly and wide open. We boarded a big Coach Bus and started our day.

As we headed to our first destination, I got to know my partner for the day, Kyle Stewart, who incidentally grew up in the area we were about to tour. Kyle is New York Farm Bureau's governmental affairs representative and was raised on a dairy farm. (He also married a girl from Ronkonkoma. I paid attention!) I knew he was going to be a great asset to this team as I peeked into my folder and realized we had to answer questions about our day. And there were an awful lot of cow questions.

A Farm Bureau field representative oversees every county in New York State. This staff member works closely with the county Board of Directors and helps to bring their issues of concern back to Albany where Farm Bureau can then represent it to the legislature. Only Long Island Farm Bureau has it's own staff and registered lobbyists. Our agricultural is more diverse and concentrated than the rest of New York State.

Our first stop was at the Borden Orchard and Dairy in Easton. This farm is owned and operated as a family corporation on 776 acres with 160 cows and 20 acres of fruit trees. This was a big farm where they rely strictly on family to operate the business except during the apple harvest when they hire locals to help out. Tom Borden talked to us about the fruit tree portion of the business and showed us his equipment and storage facilities.

topical medications and reversed with hair transplant. By the time we are in our forties, the "annoying little wrinkles" of earlier years are now quite prominent and respond well to chemical peeling using TCA or Jessner's Solution, both of which are stronger than alpha hydroxy acids and lasers are available for getting rid of brown "age" spots on face and hands as well as broken blood vessels on the face. Ebrium laser resurfacing is also an option at this time, as in coblation eletrosurgery resurfacing. Superficial wrinkle fillers, like Zyderm and dermalogen are also enormously helpful for those in their forties, as is liposuction of the chin and neck for a "cleaner", more youthful and refreshed look.

In our fifties, deeper wrinkle fillers like Zyplast, autologous fat transfer, Cymetra and silicone are available to rejuvenate aging skin. Facial implants like Goretex and Alloderm are also options. Blepharoplasy (eyelid lift) lip rejuvenation surgery, mini facelift (S-lift) and Co2 laser resurfacing are also available for maximum results. As we age beyond our fifties and into our sixties and seventies. cutting edge cosmetic dermatologists recommend topical 5-flurouacil, pulse peels, and even deep chemical peels to augment full facelift and brow lift surgery.

On The Wild Side WITH SUSAN SIMM

KEEPING SQUIRRELS OUT OF BIRDFEEDERS

Tired of squirrels eating their weight in seed at your birdfeeder? Keeping them out (yes, it can be done!) requires a little patience and expense, but what you spend in anti-squirrel equipment you'll make up for in seed savings.

Location, Location!

Many people think about birdfeeders and trees in the same thought. Placing a feeder in a tree that is not "squirrel-proof" (the feeder, that is) is an open invitation to the furry grey acrobats to come to lunch, breakfast and dinner. Squirrels can launch themselves up to 8 feet horizontally from the trunk of a tree onto a hanging feeder, even if it extends way out on a limb and has a squirrel "baffle" over it. Baffles come in several shapes and sizes and are made of either metal (best) or plastic. The ones that are used for hanging feeders are disks that go over the feeders, like umbrellas, and will keep the squirrel out only if the feeder is hanging at least 8 feet from anything in all directions.

The best location for a feeder is on a pole in the middle of a 10-foot diameter circle, away from trees. Put a nice, wide baffle 4-5 feet up the pole and voila! Your feeder will be effectively "squirrel proofed." "Squirrel-Proof" Feeders

Many people cannot, or will not for esthetic reasons, put a feeder in the middle of their yards. If you cannot get 8 or 10 feet from trees or fences, there are alternatives.

First, there are a couple of good "squirrel-proof" feeders on the market. (I say "squirrel-proof" because even the best feeder can sometimes be defeated by an extemely persistant critter.) One is the "Absolute" feeder, a farily attractive green metal object with a perch that can be adjusted to eliminate both squirrels and large pest birds, such as grackles. Most models come with poles but they can also be hing from trees.

Our next stop landed us at The Museums At Penope Farms in Cambridge, NY. This is a Farm Equipment museum collected by Mr. Dick McGuire to give the present and future generations a glimpse of things that were used in homes, barns and fields by the families of yesterday. We were regaled with stories of Dick's very impressive and fascinating life. He was a past New York Farm Bureau President as well as New York's Commissioner of Agriculture and Markets.

After lunch we toured Reafield Farm, also in Cambridge. This family dairy farm is currently run by 3 generations of the Rea Family on 430 acres with 135 milking cows. And again here, the operation is handled with only family labor except for extra drivers during hay and corn season. Everyone in this family has a side business. Mr. Reas wife Carol has a herd of 30 sheep and crafts sweaters from their wool. His son has a manure hauling business and his daughter in-law has a calf raising business.

Our last stop of the day was at Hand Melon Farm in Greenwich, NY. This fruit and vegetable operation supports a roadside farmstand and a wholesale market. This farm was very similar to what you would see here on Long Island including a U-pick field for berries.

As we headed back to Albany, all of the field representatives spoke enthusiastically and affectionately about their counties and what they produced.

I especially loved the way they knew wonderful family history of the farmers they talked about. I thought only Joe and Becky did that! We laughed along with their funny and touching stories and I got a real sense of the devotion all of the staff felt for what they did. I enjoyed my adventure and feel a real connection to what I now do. In the end, I won a bottle of apple/cranberry wine made by a little fruit orchard at the tippy-top of New York State where they named the business Allison's winery because the owner's daughter Allison was such a whiner. You gotta love that!

Carolyn McAllister, Director of Public Relations for Long Island Farm Bureau, is filling in for Joe Gergela who is back in Albany this week for end of session.

Another is the "Squirrel Beater," a hanging feeder covered with a mesh cage that closes off feeding ports when a squirrel hangs on it, attempting to get seed. This one is only suitable for birds that can hang as well as perch. It's great for attracting nuthatch, woodpeckers, titmice and chickadees but, unfortunately, eliminates cardinals. It's All in the Seed

Yet another possiblilty is to switch to safflower seed. This is a small white seed similar in shape to black oil sunflower yet it is far less attractive to squirrels than sunflower. It is also more expensive, so this needs to be considered when going this route.

An advantage to switching to safflower in addition to discouraging squirrels is that it is also much less appealing to grackles, a flock of which can easily empty most feeders in a day while keeping away almost all other feeder visitors

If You Can't Beat 'Em...

Sometimes the easiest and most effective way of keeping squirrels out of your feeder is simply to feed them away from the birds. A squirrel with a full stomach is much less likely to raid your birdfeeders than one with an empty one. And besides, they can absolutely hysterical to watch!

There are cute wooden feeders that hold dried ears of corn and box-shaped feeders that the squirrel must open in order to get to his dinner. But the funniest invention I have seen to date is the "Squngee": yes, a bungee cord for squirrels. Hung in a tree away from the trunk, the squirrels hang and swing in mid-air while gnawing away on the corn cobs. Hilarious! You may even forget how mad you get when they get into your feeders? (Then again, maybe not...)

Squirrels are nothing if not persistent, but with a little patience you can prevent them from getting to all of your birdseed.

Next week, learn about nature's flying jewels: our hummingbirds. We have only one native variety in our area, the ruby throat, but they are just beautiful and not all that difficult to attract.

POLICE BLOTTER

A resident of the Yellow Brick Road had an unfortunate encounter in East Hampton. Specifically, a young lady who hailed from a town by the aforementioned name in New Jersey, told police that her '98 Range Rover had suffered damage at the hands of three Good Samaritans who turned vicious. She had been stuck on the beach and three men in a Nissan SUV had helped her in extricating herself. This done, her rescuers asked for beer in payment. The young lady refused, whereupon the trio were angered. They followed her on Route 27 and rammed the Range Rover's rear bumper. The men continued to follow the young woman, who went to her residence. The men got out. One had a sledge hammer and struck the rear window of the Range Rover. The Nissan took off, but police, acting on a description of the vehicle stopped it on Flamingo Road. The driver was placed under arrest for criminal mischief. Marijuana seeds were also found in the vehicle.

This is the story of two white men and a black poodle named Ed. In Sagaponack, a security guard at Ira Rennert's gargantuan construction project saw two white males and a black poodle named Ed emerging from the basement around 4 a.m. one weekend morning. When the guard asked what they were doing there they replied they had made a mistake and left, taking Ed the poodle with them.

A resident of Patchogue could have entirely avoided being chased down by the police, a subsequent DWI and arrest, if he had not given an officer who had stopped a vehicle along the road the finger.

A hit and run involved two cars in Amagansett. One of the cars was parked with no one in it. When the driver returned to it he found damage to his car and a souvenir, a three armed side view mirror. Determined to find the culprit, the owner of the damaged car went door to door with the mirror and in the process discovered a car with passenger side damage and a missing side view mirror.

Dan's LETTERS

AIR POLLUTION

Dear Dan,

I would really appreciate it if you could post a safety warning. I have been coming out to the Hamptons for the past six years and always felt safe, until this past holiday weekend, I called a reputable cab company, to find out someone was listening in on there scanners and picking up girls in the wee hours of the morning. Luckily for me and my friend, Hampton Coach called me to tell me she was also in front of the house, after this previous driver was already there. The driver got into the backseat and told me my friend was going in the other taxi. I am always aware of what goes on around me and told him I don't think so since we are both in the same house! I would like for you too help me make it aware and give you more detail to my story. That if you don't see Hampton Coach or another car service name that you are aware of, please, please don't get in the car! He then called my guy friends' cell phone cursing obscenities. And had the nerve to show up again the next night! I am filing a report with the police department in order to capture this person! Please email me back concerning this matter, I would hate to have to change my feelings of the whole reason for the Hamptons, (to relax and enjoy oneself!)

Stefanie Cumming New York City

FROM ONE FIREMAN TO ANOTHER: THANKS! Dear Dan.

Early in the morning of Wednesday, May 30 a properly functioning smoke detector helped save the lives of my parents

I am a New York City Firefighter. My mother and father are both in their eighties and the fire in their home was a life-threatening emergency. The rapid response of the North Sea fire Department, Volunteer Ambulance Team, and the Police was absolutely spectacular. They all arrived in a very short period of time and saved the day. My father built this house on his own, without the use of power tools, many years ago.

The firemen moved many heavy items to a secure area. They stopped the fire from spreading, cutting a hole in the roof directly above. The police and ambulance personnel comforted my parents, giving them appropriate medical attention. All of this at 1:30 in the morning!

To all the brave and caring volunteers who serve this community so selflessly, all I can say, on behalf of the entire Jordan family, is thank you and God bless all of you!

"The Society for the Preservation of Long Island Antiquities (SPLIA) and the Seatuck Environmental Association announce a collabo-rative program at the Sherwood-Jayne House in East Setauket, New York, Saturday, June 23, 2001 at 10:00 a.m.

Wild, Edible and Medicinal Plant Walk

Alan Russo, a Long Island Naturalist and amateur ethnobotanist, will lead a walk on the grounds of the Sherwood-Jayne House. We will rediscover how the people in Long Island's past used wild plants for food, medicine and utilitarian needs.
Learn how plants considered today as common weeds were instrumental in the survival of Long Island's early inhabitants.

Why Two Beach Cottages Are Better Than One. What separates them is a lovely courtyard filled with patios, gardens, and arbors. What unites them is that both were designed by famous architect Albert Sheffer, reknowned for his use of wood and beams to create a rustic, yet cozy ambiance. Main cottage has living room with fireplace and two bedrooms, while the small cottage features studio with fireplace, bedroom and bath. Located on a leafy quiet lane just steps from the ocean. At last, the real answer to today's Real Estate Market.

In a field rampant with distrust, misinformation and confusion, where broker's are playing games with their client's heads, misleading the buyer about zoning and the true cost of improvements, and ethics are a joke - now comes the answer long ago discovered in Florida. The concept of a Buyer's Broker.

FitzSimmons Real Estate is the ideal brand name for today. Headed by a graduate of Harvard Business School, a certified appraiser trained in the analytical approach to value, he has taught Real Estate law, ethics, zoning, sub-division regulation finance and negotiation.

His associate is an established quality builder and the office is staffed with adults who find you property of justifiable value. The contractual cost of this service is probably nothing since the negotiation is net and the fees are covered by the commission spread. A retainer is required and liability is nonexistent.

> FitzSimmons Real Estate 631-537-1147
